Curbs on Surveillance Not Enough: Muskie

WASHINGTON (AP) — Complaints against Army and FBI surveillance activities have prompted legislation intended to give Congress more control over domestic intelligence.

Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., originator of last year's Earth Day, which allegedly was watched closely by the FBI, proposed a commission to catalogue authority and methods of all federal surveillance.

Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, has proposed a Domestic Intelligence Review Board to supervise domestic intelligence operations.

However, Muskie said that may not be enough. "I believe that Congress will have to legislate precise limits over the scope of domestic surveillance and over the use of collected information."

It was Muskie who accused the FBI of assigning agents to spy on the Earth Day antipollution rallies, an event that had as participants some 150 members of Congress and 100 representatives of the Nixon administration.

Muskie made public what he said was an FBI report noting his own speech to a Washington rally—"a short anti-pollution speech" the agent was quoted as recalling. Muskie said the agent's general assessment was: "no hint of violence, no threat of insurrection . . . ."

"If antipollution rallies are a subject of intelligence concern, is anything immune?" Muskie asked in a Senate speech.

Nelson said, "I am shocked to learn that the FBI felt it necessary to spy on the literally tens of millions of Americans who were involved in Earth Day activities across the country."

Neither the FBI nor the Justice Department commented on Muskie's statement. FBI sources did, however, indicate that any Earth Day surveillance may have been aimed at keeping tabs on such groups as Students for a Democratic Society and the Progressive Labor Party.

The report revealed by Muskie quoted Rennie Davis, one of the Chicago Seven, as saying "the conspiracy is joining forces with such groups as women's liberation, the black liberation struggle and ecology forces to fight at every level of our society to end the war in Vietnam."

Counteroffensive Is Launched in Highlands

Pain Is Etched on the face of a wounded South Vietnamese soldier as he is removed from a stretcher for a helicopter flight to Pleiku Wednesday. Wounded from fighting at Firebase 6 were being returned for medical treatment.

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer

SAIGON (AP) — Thousands of South Vietnamese troops today launched a counteroffensive against North Vietnamese forces in the central highlands.

The North Vietnamese kept up their 16-day offensive with new attacks around besieged Fire Base 6, on a command post at nearby Tan Canh, and near Fire Base Lonely 80 miles to the south.

In eastern Cambodia, 200 miles to the south, North Vietnamese forces sharply escalated shelling attacks against South Vietnamese and Cambodian positions with one of the heaviest bombardments of the year.

Little Action

The U.S. Command reported little action involving American ground troops, but field reports said one American adviser was killed and one was missing in fighting around Fire Base 6. Four of the five U.S. advisers at Fire Base 6 were airlifted out Wednesday.

The command reported that 42 Americans were killed in action in Indochina last week, less than half the 88 reported killed in the week before. It was the lowest weekly toll in two months.

The South Vietnamese Command reported 523 government troops killed and 1,168 wounded last week. The allied commands said 2,894 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong were killed over the same period.

Fanning Out

South Vietnamese spokesmen at Pleiku said government infantrymen from the 22nd Division had begun fanning out from Fire Base 6 in a search and clear operation to drive the enemy from the base manned by Vietnamese.

Saigon headquarters announced that several battalions from the South Vietnamese 23rd Infantry Division also launched a new drive around Fire Base Lonely.

Three North Vietnamese troops were reported killed in a clash, while government losses were one killed and nine wounded.

U.S. Helicopter

Six U.S. helicopters carried in ammunition, food and water to Fire Base 6 today without drawing any fire.

But heavy fighting was reported about 1½ miles southeast of the base.

South Vietnamese headquarters said 38 North Vietnamese troops were killed in an hour-long battle with government paratroopers who were backed by U.S. air strikes. Four South Vietnamese paratroopers were killed and eight were wounded, headquarters reported.

North Vietnamese troops also launched a ground probe against the command post of the 22nd Infantry Division at Tan Canh but were driven back. A communique said one South Vietnamese soldier was killed. Enemy losses were not known.

Earlier, South Vietnamese headquarters reported 158 North Vietnamese troops killed in fighting Tuesday and Wednesday on two sides of Fire Base 6, about half of them by air and artillery strikes. South Vietnamese losses were reported as four killed, six missing and 39 wounded.

Parish Backs Priest After Secret Marriage Is Revealed

PACIFICA, Calif. (AP) — The parish council has come to the support of a prominent Roman Catholic pastor ousted after Church officials discovered he has been married seven years and has a 5-year-old son.

Archbishop Joseph T. McGucken said in a statement Wednesday that the Rev. Robert F. Duryea, a priest for 25 years, has been suspended and automatically excommunicated because of the marriage.

Robert Duryea

Father Duryea, 49, confirmed in an interview that he was married June 16, 1964 by a fellow Catholic priest, whom he declined to identify.

He said his son, Paul, who was named for Pope Paul VI, and his attractive 30-year-old wife attended his last mass which he celebrated Easter Sunday at St. Peter's church.

The priest declined to identify his wife for fear of harassment, but said he would move with his family to "somewhere in the Santa Clara Valley," about 50 miles away.

Excellent Leadership

The 15-member council for the 4,000 member parish issued a statement saying it was "shocked" by the removal of Father Duryea whose "leadership of our community as a married priest has been excellent."

"We feel that the Church's rule of celibacy which deprives our community of ministers such as Father Duryea should be changed as soon as possible," the council statement said.

"We feel that, if it were in any way possible, we would keep him here as pastor."

Father Duryea said, "I realize that my marriage has been known about by many people in the parish for more than a year, and I very much appreciate their loyalty."

He added, "I have proved to myself and to anyone with an open mind that the traditional objection to a married priesthood is nonsense: that marriage would necessarily distract a man from the full service of his ministry."

His assistant, the Rev. Lawrence Purcell, took over temporary administration of the parish.

Father Purcell said the marriages, baptisms and the other Church services performed by Father Duryea are in no way challenged by his excommunication, even though it is retroactive to the date of his marriage.

Father Duryea was ordained in 1946 and was an Air Force chaplain before working in parishes in San Jose, Oakland and Berkeley.

The tall, handsome and gentle clergyman was vice president of the San Francisco Priests Senate, the archbishop's chief advisory body.

His brother, John, is Catholic chaplain at Stanford University.

Archbishop McGucken expressed regret for his action saying, "We will keep him in our prayers, as well as the welfare of the people of the parish, which is uppermost in our minds."

Ouch!

WASHINGTON (AP)—Whoever said "taxation without representation" should see how it works with it.

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce—on a day when the average American taxpayer still is worrying about last year's tax bills — says Mr. Average hasn't made one cent for himself so far this year.

And he won't, the chamber says, until after May 10. All earlier earnings will pay off 1971 federal, state and local tax bills next year.

Or, if you want to spread it out, that's two hours and 51 minutes of each eight-hour day Mr. Average works to support his government.

If you waited until the last day—today—to fill out your 1970 return, don't feel lonely. The Internal Revenue Service says about 53 million of the nation's 72 million taxpayers had completed the job by last Saturday.

That's about average, the IRS adds.

Restaurant Cheese Spiked With LSD

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Police warned restaurants today to guard against pranksters spiking condiments.

The reason? A Hollywood woman and her son ate spaghetti sprinkled with Parmesan cheese at an Italian restaurant and were hospitalized from the effects of the hallucinogenic drug LSD.

The container of cheese had enough LSD to kill the two, had they eaten more, police said. "It apparently was put in there by somebody with a sick mind," Sgt. Paul Osteen said.

Police said restaurants should use extreme caution in keeping condiment containers away from potential pranksters, adding that this may be difficult.

The cafe where Helen Jones, 50, and her son Michael, 16, dined Sunday said it would begin serving such spices from its kitchen, not leaving containers on tables. The restaurant owner was unaware that LSD had been put in the cheese shaker, Osteen said.

"I had pains in my chest and I thought I was going to die," Mrs. Jones said. "After a while, I felt like there were strange animals of different colors coming from my skin and body."

She and her son were treated for drug intoxication at a hospital and released Monday. They had returned home after the meal and began feeling the strange effects a half hour later.

Peace Talks Reopen With No Progress

PARIS (AP)—North Vietnam restated today its old position for ending the Indochina war and the United States accused the North Vietnamese of using the peace talks "for your propaganda purposes instead of genuine discussion."

U.S. Ambassador David K.E. Bruce declared the United States is ready "to negotiate an agreed timetable for complete withdrawals as part of an overall settlement."

Ambassador Xuan Thuy, head of the North Vietnamese delegation, ended a six-week boycott of the peace talks. He restated the Communist terms at the 109th weekly session.

"The problem with regard to the question of withdrawal does not arise from our refusal to fix a date but rather from your refusal to consider necessary and similar mutual action on your part," Bruce said.

Ready for Talks

"We are ready for discussions among all the parties concerned without preconditions. Instead of wasting time and lives with self-serving propaganda and pursuing a fruitless quest for victory, you would do better to begin responding reasonably to the needs of peace.

"For more than two years now ... you have avoided negotiation. You have refused to end the killing, you have pursued your desire to dominate the peoples of Indochina at the point of a gun. It is time for you to stop. On our side, there is a sincere desire to end the war. But the actual return to peace depends on you."

South Vietnam's Pham Dang Lam reiterated his proposal for evacuation of prisoners of war to a neutral country. Bruce expressed "strong support" for the proposal, rejected by the Communist delegations at last week's session.

Face Defeat

Thuy said unless his terms were accepted, the United States faces defeat throughout Indochina.

Thuy said the United States must:

1. Withdraw all its forces by June 30 or by "another reasonable" date.

2. Cease all bombing and reconnaissance flights over North Vietnam.

3. Agree to the establishment of a coalition regime in Saigon removing President Nguyen Van Thieu and Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky from power.

Thuy's restatement of the Communist terms indicated that the Hanoi leadership was not prepared to make any concession at this stage likely to break the deadlock.

Thuy returned Friday from the Soviet party congress in Moscow, where he discussed the peace talks with top-ranking Hanoi officials who came to Moscow for the occasion.

All Means

He accused Nixon of seeking "by all possible means" to drag out the American withdrawal despite what he said was the growing opposition to the war in the United States.

"This is a great error on Mr. Nixon's part," Thuy declared. "If he obstinately clings to this erroneous policy, he will inevitably meet with total failure. Not only will the Vietnamese people oppose his policy of Vietnamization, but the American people too will step up their opposition to his erroneous policy."

He denounced Nixon's stated concern for the safety of American prisoners and his troop withdrawal plans as "sheer sophistry and deception."

Prolongs List

"Everyone knows that it is due to the U.S. aggression that American servicemen are killed or captured," he added. "By continuing the maintenance of U.S. forces in South Vietnam to pursue the war of aggression, the Nixon administration only prolongs the list of wounded or captured Americans.

"Only by totally and rapidly pulling them out, can it ensure the U.S. troops' security and the captive servicemen's early return to their families," Thuy said.

The Viet Cong's Mrs. Nguyen Thi Binh, accused Nixon of deliberately ignoring Communist assurance concerning the safety of American troops and the release of American prisoners following announcement of a total withdrawal.

Commenting on the President's speech last week, Mrs. Binh said "he pretended to commiserate with the fate of young Americans" while, in reality, pursuing the chimeric aim of military victory."

Abortion Endorsed at First Population Growth Hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The subject of birth-control abortion, denounced by President Nixon, has surfaced at the first public hearings of his Commission on Population Growth and the American Future.

The commission summoned new witnesses today after hearing three citizens Wednesday urge it to endorse repeal of state laws restricting abortions.

Dr. Alan F. Guttmacher, president of Planned Parenthood-World Population, called for repeal of antiabortion laws as part of a wide-ranging program of voluntary population control. He suggested also more and better contraceptives, free family planning services for everyone who wants them, including single persons and teen-agers, and increased availability of voluntary sterilization.

Nixon Statement

He criticized President Nixon's statement earlier this month that abortion for birth control and abortion-on-demand laws are personally repugnant to him.

"I regret that he did this at a time when this subject is at issue before over 20 state legislatures and the Supreme Court," Guttmacher said.

Former Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udall, a Democrat, called Nixon's statement lamentable. "I can only believe that the President sensed some opportunity to make political capital," he said.

Repeal Laws

"For my own part, I urge the commission to endorse outright repeal of abortion laws in recognition of the overriding rights of women, the morale of families and the contributions of such a policy to reduced population growth." But Udall said abortion is the least desirable method of birth control and predicted it would become less important as better methods of contraception are developed.

Wilma Scott Heide, national chairwoman of the feminist National Organization for Women (NOW), also called for abortion-law repeal to help liberate women.

Msgr. James T. McHugh, director of the family life division of the U.S. Catholic Conference, said the Roman Catholic Church still opposes birth-control abortion on moral grounds.

The commission, midway through its two-year life span, said in an interim report last month that a national population policy is needed. It said the nation surely will grow to 300 million population sooner or later, and must decide how quickly it wants to reach that figure and whether to expand to 400 million.

The commission, headed by John D. Rockefeller III, is scheduled to publish its findings next year.

Fight Pending on College Students

Assembly Okays Voting Age Amendment

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Ratification of the pending United States constitutional amendment to authorize voting at the age of 18 was rammed through the Wisconsin Assembly Wednesday. But there were signs that the legislature will quarrel long and bitterly on the demand of some Wisconsin communities with large college populations for a state law to require students to vote in the localities of their origin.

The first roll call on the ratification of the federal amendment showed a house division of 71 to 28. (Nearly half of the states already have ratified the proposed amendment. Approval of three-fourths of the states is needed.) But some of the negative votes apparently reflected the anxiety of some members about the problem of defining the residence of college age voters. The final tally that sent the 18 year voting plan to the state senate, which is also expected to approve, was 91 to eight. The only dissenters from the northeastern districts of the state were Reps. Gordon Bradley of rural Oshkosh and Donald Helgeson of Manitowoc, both Republicans.

Concurrent Legislation

The demand for the concurrent consideration of a bill that would tend to disqualify young voters from being counted as electors in the communities where they are attending college was defeated by a margin of 58 to 39.

Discussion of the merits of the reduction of the voting age rule from 21 years to 18 was desultory, evidently reflecting the conviction of even those legislators who had been reluctant about proposals for such an extension of the franchise through state legislation that the issue has become academic with the approval by the congress of the federal amendment and the virtual certainty that the required number of other states will ratify it.

Democrats in the house controlled by the Democratic party were non-committal on the merits of preventing college students from voting in college towns. But they mustered easily the required votes to defer a decision on the issue.

Smaller Towns

The worry of some municipalities with colleges within their borders, and notably some of the smaller college towns of the state, was mostly expressed by Republicans.

But GOP leaders said privately that they were not hopeful about the prospects for writing a law to provide such restrictions. A pending measure would permit a college student to vote in his college community only by showing that he is a permanent resident, as through auto registration, tax payments, employment, or other tests.

The demand for concurrent consideration of the college student qualification proposal was made by Rep. John Shabaz of Waukesha County, Assistant Republican majority leader.

Simple approval of extending the franchise to younger citizens, without considering where they should be counted as legal residents for voting purposes, "is ignoring the realities of the problem," he asserted.

Rep. James Azim of Grant County noted that Platteville State University will provide new voters under the 18 year voting law at least equal in numbers to the permanent, adult members of the community, and said the city is deeply concerned about the prospect.

Rep. Byron Wackett of Jefferson County also told of the concern of older residents of college communities about the take-over of municipal government by campus student voters.

"When school ends, the good old permanent taxpayers of such communities will be left holding the bag," he said, repeating earlier fears about student control of city councils, bond issue decisions and other vital local political issues.

Muskie May Pay for Ignoring Politicians

Overextension of Low Profile Tactics Turns Democrats Against Forerunner

BY ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The stunning miscalculation by Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine that a low profile should extend to ignoring politicians, probably costing him a chance to tie up the Democratic Presidential nomination, was underscored here recently at a social gathering attended by the Democratic Congressmen of Texas.

With the exception of conservative Rep. Bob Casey of Houston (a Muskie neighbor) the

Evans Novak

Texans were unimpressed by their party's frontrunner. Most said they preferred Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota. A couple were eyeing Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington.

What makes this significant is that Muskie might have had all or nearly all the Texans had he profitably used the time since his triumphant election eve telecast last November. Instead, he has done nothing to build an organization there. Moreover, he has ignored two powerful Texans most interested in him last November but now having second thoughts: Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes and Democratic National Treasurer Robert Strauss.

Other Examples

Texas is no isolated example. In New York, Illinois, and Ohio, Muskie has neither laid down a rudimentary organization nor kept touch with political leaders Moreover, until very recently, the omissions have been intentional.

When that election eve telecast made Muskie a runaway frontrunner, he and his advisers eyed the vulnerability of past frontrunners and decided to maintain a low profile — few speeches, few trips around the country. That was sound strategy, but they extended the low profile to ignoring politicians and political spadework. That miscalculation has brought a tentative verdict, delivered privately by top state party leaders, that Muskie is dead.

Almost surely, that verdict is premature — if only for the thinness of the field. The two most likely alternatives, Humphrey and Sen Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts, evoke groans in wide party segments.

Furthermore, Muskie continues to do well with the public (though the Gallup Poll showed him slipping against President Nixon). The cumulative survey of 9,075 voters in 21 states through March by private pollster Oliver Quayle showed a 12-month edge of 48 per cent to 42 per cent by Muskie over the President (the balance for Gov. George Wallace) — Muskie's highest edge ever.

Polls Vs. Talk

The question for Muskie now is whether these triumphant poll figures will be undermined by the Muskie-can't-be-nominated talk now being reflected in the press. If the polls decline, the little hard, committed support he has among politicians will erode.

The reaction to this at Muskie headquarters in midtown Washington is characteristically wedded to issues rather than organizations Thus, he seems more upset by his recent troubles with the mayors over revenue-sharing than his problems with state politicians. Dissatisfied with his own speechwriters. Muskie plans to farm out future speeches. He is making plans to conduct Senate subcommittee hearings on key subjects around the country.

But all that ignores the heart of his problem in, for example, so key a state as Illinois. An invitation for Muskie to address the testimonial dinner of Lt. Gov. Paul Simon, probable nominee for Governor next year, was so badly handled that nobody knew whether he was accepting or declining; he ended up declining. The Democratic leader in one of the state's largest downstate counties is still waiting for a reply to his letter. The state's Democratic chieftains never hear from Muskie himself.

The problem of the unanswered letter and phone call, endemic since Muskie's emergence as a national figure in 1964, is in the capable hands of his new campaign manager, Washington lawyer Berl Bernhard, but it is still unsolved. Seemingly, bringing order out of chaos on L Street has a lower priority than speech content.

Bernhard also is urging Muskie, when he has a spare minute, to telephone those politicians he has been ignoring. That workaday habit, second nature for Hubert Humphrey or Ted Kennedy, seems agony for Ed Muskie. Yet failure to make those contacts seems to have lost him the opportunity of tieing up decisive numbers of politicians for the nomination. Continued failure could conceivably lose him the nomination itself.

Veterans Disappointed As Calley Fund Flops

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 1970 said Monday it is disappointed at the response to a drive to raise funds to aid in the defense of Lt. William L Calley Jr.

"If we reach $1,000 we will be lucky," said Gerald Pinkleton, post commander who helped organize the drive. Only $277 was raised Saturday, but contributions still were coming in by mail, he said.

Calley was convicted at Ft. Benning, Ga., by a court-martial jury of murder of 22 civilians at My Lai, Vietnam.

Israelis Raid Border Village As Retaliation

3 Houses Blown Up Before Artillery Repulses Attackers

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Israeli raiders crossed the Lebanese border early today and blew up three houses in the village of Kfar Kela, then pulled out under a Lebanese artillery barrage, an army spokesman in Beirut reported.

There was no confirmation of the raid from Israel.

The Lebanese spokesman said poor visibility made it impossible to determine whether the Israelis suffered any casualties. Apparently there were no Arab casualties.

The raid was believed to be a reprisal for attacks on Israeli settlements by Palestinian guerrillas based in Lebanon. The Lebanese army reported three such Israeli raids last week and said seven houses in three villages were blown up.

Elsewhere in the Middle East —

Egyptian Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad left for Moscow to talk with Soviet leaders about Israel's continued refusal to withdraw from all territory it occupied in the 1967 war. He planned a brief stopover in London.

Riad said his visit to Moscow was "within the framework of regular consultations between the two countries."

Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban told the Jerusalem Post the "oral" territorial demands Israeli leaders have made—control over the Tiran strait, the Golan Heights, the Gaza Strip and united Jerusalem, and demilitarization of the West Bank of the Jordan River—are a "maximal position" for negotiation.

"I think it sufficiently broad to leave room for flexibility, and not so rigid as to be ultimative," he said.

The former chief of the Israeli air force, Ezer Weizman told the newspaper Maariv that the delivery to Egypt of MIG23s, the Soviet Union's most advanced fighter-bomber, would not alter the balance of power along the Suez Canal.

Weizman said the Israeli air force's American Phantoms "are superior to the MIG23 and the Israeli pilot is better than the Egyptian or Russian pilot. In the event of war, the Israeli air force will shoot down the MIG23s as it shot down its predecessors."

Sources at the U.S. Defense Department reported early this week that some of the new Soviet planes may have been sent to Egypt.

In Cairo, representatives of nine Arab heads of state still were unable to agree on what to do about the hostility between the Jordanian regime and the Palestine guerrillas. Algeria joined the conference and called for an enlarged summit meeting.

Americans' Historic Visit To Red China Nears End

By JOHN RODERICK
Associated Press Writer

SHANGHAI (AP) — Eighteen Americans strolled in spring warmth today along the Shanghai Bund, the famed waterfront of China's largest city, from which the Communists drove their countrymen more than two decades ago.

The 15 members of the U.S. table tennis delegation and three newsmen with them flew to the big industrial port from Peking, where they spent four days.

The flight was made aboard an Ilyushin 18, and Shanghai table tennis players and officials met the Americans at the Rainbow Bridge airport.

All along the road into the city, the visitors saw youngsters, some with packs on their backs and carrying photos of Chairman Mao Tse-tung, hiking to the countryside for out-of-school indoctrination in politics, production methods and military affairs.

The Americans were lodged in the Ho Ping or Peace hotel, once the proud Cathay. With its new Tientsin rugs and spacious rooms, it is one of the best in China.

Only two members of the party had visited legendary Shanghai before, John Rich of the National Broadcasting Co. and me.

Rich was in Shanghai for a short visit in April 1949.

I left China from Shanghai in 1948 after a four-year assignment during which I covered both the Nationalist and Communist sides of the Chinese civil war.

The players and the newsmen were invited to the Chinese mainland along with several other Western teams at the end of the world table tennis championships in Japan last week. It is the first sizable group of Americans admitted to Communist China in the 22 years of the People's Republic.

The Americans saw the sights in Peking, lost a round of table tennis matches to second-string Chinese teams by narrow margins, and got a warm welcome from Premier Chou En-lai at a reception Wednesday afternoon.

On their last night in the Chinese capital, the Americans saw a Chinese opera, "Taking Tiger Mountain by Strategy."

Friday the group flies back to Canton, South China's metropolis 90 miles northwest of Hong Kong. They return to the British colony by train Saturday and are expected to leave for Tokyo and home after few hours rest in Hong Kong.

The Americans were entertained at a Chinese lunch in Shanghai's industrial exhibition building, eating the city's famous smoked duck and drinking two kinds of Shanghai's equally famous rice wine.

From time to time throughout the luncheon they exchanged toasts with their smiling hosts.

Yang Shing Ya, chairman of the China Sports Association of Shanghai, in a welcoming speech, told the Americans that he and the Chinese people were "very glad you have come to Shanghai." The Americans' presence was "a sign of the friendship which we hope extends to all the American people," he said.

Graham B. Steenhoven, president of the U.S. Table Tennis association, thanked Yang for the "warm and friendly hospitality we have received here."

The players spent part of the afternoon sightseeing, then put in more than an hour practicing for their exhibition matches Thursday night against a Shanghai team.

'GI's Jo' Wins Citation From President Nixon

By PATRICK J. CONNOLLY
Associated Press Writer

OWOSSO, Mich. (AP) — Josephine McDonell has won a presidential commendation for her years of effort in helping servicemen overseas to pay for phone calls to families back home. But she says, "I already have rewards enough."

Miss McDonell, 70, is known to scores of servicemen at American bases around the world as "the GI's Jo."

President Nixon, in a letter accompanying a certificate of commendation, told Miss McDonell, "Your dedication to our country and those who are giving so much in the cause of freedom is a splendid example to all Americans."

The citation, Miss McDonell said, is "wonderful, a marvelous thing," but "I really have my citations already. I have trunks in the basement full of letters" from servicemen she has helped.

"Means a Lot"

A wounded first lieutenant from the 101st Airborne Division in Vietnam wrote to Miss McDonell on April 6 from a hospital ship. "Thanks . . . It means a lot to know that someone is thinking of us over here."

Kathleen Griffs of Lincoln, Neb., wrote that a McDonell-financed call from her fiance overseas "was the one and only, cheerful, heartwarming experience resulting from these long months of separation."

One letter from the parents of an Arkansas boy read, "We . . . want to express our heartfelt appreciation to you for helping to make it possible for us to hear Danny's voice the last time on May 24. Danny was killed in hostile action in Cambodia at 10:45 a.m. May 25."

Miss McDonell is a tiny lady who comes from a long line of Army officers.

Following a visit to a military hospital in 1948, when she concluded the wounded had been forgotten with the onset of postwar reconstruction, Miss McDonell began Jo's Operation Telephone Home to collect money for the overseas calls.

Two-Room Apartment

Since then she's spearheaded a collection drive from her two-room apartment in the Owosso Hotel.

"My idea was that you never send a man to war without love in back of him. When a man puts on the uniform of my country, his welfare becomes my concern," she said.

Contributions come in as a result of personal contacts she has made in the military, from service organizations and from veterans who benefited from her work, she said.

She accepts only checks made out to her "Telephone Home" and sends cash contributions back to donors, she said. Before Christmas, when contributions are heaviest, she may take in $750 a month, which is dispersed to various overseas commands.

Miss McDonell lives on a modest income from her father's estate and does her work without pay.

"Every dang penny of it goes to the troops for phone calls and it's accounted for."

Winding up another 16-hour day she said, "Can you imagine doing something this useful at 70. I told my doctor I want to live to be 140 and he said I might make it."

Benefit Extended By Company for Adoption Cases

SKOKIE, Ill. (AP) — The pharmaceutical laboratories of G. D. Searle & Co. announced today they will extend maternity allowance benefits to employes who legally adopt a child.

The benefit, which amounts to approximately $400, was suggested by the employes and a Searle spokesman said, "The suggestion made a great deal of sense to us."

"We pay an allowance to employes who have their own children," the spokesman added, "why shouldn't we pay those who adopt an unwanted child and help society, in addition to voluntarily accepting the responsibility of parenthood?"

The first employe to claim the new allowance was Ralph Burmeister of Glenview. He and his wife, Carol, adopted a boy in January.

New Bumper Rule Hailed, Criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's new requirement for sturdier 1973 car bumpers has brought promise of a 10-per-cent rate cut from one insurance company and criticism from consumer advocate Ralph Nader.

The Department of Transportation announced Wednesday all 1973 cars, foreign or domestic, sold in the United States must have front bumpers capable of withstanding a 5-mile-an-hour barrier crash without damage to most parts. The comparable requirement for rear bumpers was set at 2½ mph.

The department originally had poposed uniform bumper heights and a 5-mph standard for front and rear bumpers on 1973 models. But the height requirement was postponed until 1974 and the rear-bumper test softened after resistance from automakers.

The rear requirement would be increased to 4 mph for 1974 models. And crash tests in that year would use a weighted pendulum rather than a barrier.

The Allstate Insurance Co. hailed the standard as a step toward "old-time," effective bumpers and promised a 10-per-cent discount on collision premiums to those who buy 1973 cars. Allstate previously said it would cut collision premiums 20 per cent on any car with front and read bumpers capable of withstanding a 5-mph crash.

But Nader accused the Transportation Department of "unconscionable capitulation to the auto manufacturers' pressure."

"This minimal standard provides the manufacturers with the best of both worlds," Nader said. "They have already used it as a threat to dramatically raise vehicle prices, heaping the blame on the government, and at the same time it does not require significant upgrading of current designs."

Federal safety experts said improved bumpers made of rubber or plastic or employing shock absorbers could cost consumers as much as $40.

Vitamin C a Cholesterol Fighter?

CHICAGO (AP) — Ascorbic acid, or vitamin C, may prove helpful in removing fatty deposits from blood vessels, a Pennsylvania biochemist says.

Experiments with rats indicate this is another potential use for this now controversial compound, Dr. Ralph Mumma of the Pennsylvania State University College of Agriculture said Wednesday.

Dr. Linus Pauling, a Nobel Prize winning chemist, has claimed that vitamin C is particularly effective in preventing colds when taken in large amounts. A number of scientists have disputed the claim, however.

Mumma told a session at the annual meeting of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology that work he and a graduate student, Anthony Verlangieri, have done confirms some findings of Soviet scientists.

Soviet Claim

The Soviet researchers have used ascorbic acid in rats, rabbits and human beings to flush cholesterol from blood vessels.

Mumma said he would not extend his work to human beings but added, "I hope it has meaning in humans." He said he has increased his own daily intake of ascorbic acid.

He reported success in flushing cholesterol from rats and said he plans more studies with rats and other animals.

Atherosclerosis, a major cause of disease and death, occurs when blood vessels become clogged with cholesterol deposits. The flow of blood is impeded and the heart is affected.

Mumma said his experiments showed that a derivative of ascorbic acid converts cholesterol, normally a relatively insoluble compound into a sulfate which is excreted from the body.

Men Notice Gals Who Wear Glasses

Eyewear! The new name for glasses! Even the girls who don't need corrective eye care are wearing the fun, feminine and fabulous eyewear (with clear lenses) as fashion accessories.

Not too many years ago, the girl who needed glasses felt left out — her choice was limited to the absolute necessary (for vision). How times have changed!

Today everybody wants to wear glasses — and that includes men, too. I've thought about that (what else to do on thousands of miles on airplanes?) and here is a first-hand, personal experience, Phyllis George analysis. People look at the face first. Right? When introduced to someone, where do you look? The eyes, of course. And when meeting an old friend, don't you look him in the eye and say "hi." The eyes are expressive and set each person apart from the next.

So it follows that the eyes shouldn't be hidden. New fashions call attention to the eyes in the most dramatic way. They're fun and they are now designed to match every fashionable look. You might say they frame the eyes — adding a bright happy look.

I made a stop in Chicago and had my eyes examined (that's important and I urge everyone to take good care of the only pair of eyes he'll ever have) and that's where I discovered the latest fashions in eyewear.

I talked with an expert, Mr. Jack Van Tuinen, president of Uhlemann Optical Co. He advises wearers of glasses to select eyewear to enhance their cosmetic needs in colors to compliment the wardrobe — and designs for moods and occasions.

I saw, too, that the new plastic lens gives protection for the eyes. Sometimes coating on glass protects, as well while making the eyes look brighter and clearer.

"Now we have 18 tints," Mr. Van Tuinen told me, "and the lens can be as light or dark as you'd like."

Can't you picture me, selecting the wildest, most fashionable eyewear with all colors of tints in the lenses? What fun! Now I have all designs — including Christian Dior. Talk about glamour! I have red and blue striped big round ones with the palest blue lens, large ones in crystals with crimson tints and tiniest square granny style. I even have "under the dryer" eyewear. They have short temples (I always called them ear pieces) and half-eye lenses for reading. And my prize is a pair of tiny glasses which slide together and fit into a midget case perfect for my evening purse.

Being an all-girl girl, I asked these knowing people about wearing eye make-up with glasses. I was told that regular eye make-up is fine but near-sighted people should wear a little extra since eyes look smaller behind their lens.

What I'm hoping is that I can show girls who wear glasses that they're lucky! We're fortunate that our eyes are being protected and that we can select a fun fashion accessory, "compliment getter" for our wardrobes.

If you're shopping for new eyewear, look for the latest in metal. There's round and oval and hexagon — small, medium and large — whatever goes with the real you. Then look to tints such as mulberry, jade, lemon, crimson, sand and many others. Select the tint which complements the colors in your wardrobe. My choices will last a long time and when I dress each morning, I choose from my wardrobe of eyewear as I do from my wardrobe of shoes and other accessories.

Looking for compliments? Men notice fashionable eyewear! Matter of fact, men's glasses are as exciting as women's and they're having as much fun as the gals.

Let's see. Which glasses shall I wear with my black pants suit? The round gold filigree with the sand-colored lens?

Miss America: Phyllis George

Designers Using Cotton Knits

Cotton knits take center stage on the spring fashion scene.

Fashion designers are using them in a variety of weights from jacquard patterns and medium gauge ribs to super fine gauge jerseys.

Typical of the new look for knits in sportswear is a lace-front pullover in ribbed cotton combined with knickers in a diamond jacquard motif.

The State of the State

The state division of economic development remarks in a current bulletin that the 1970 census data as thus far reported contains "some surprising information" with respect to the condition of the state of Wisconsin.

When the division makes such a comment, we tend to pay heed. Philip Sundal of the division is noted for his perceptive scrutiny of population trends of basic significance to the health and prosperity of our favorite part of the country.

Currently the division's interest has been aroused by the revelation of the federal census of last year that Wisconsin failed to show during the last decade the "out-migration" that it experienced during the ten year period from 1950 to 1960. "Out-migration" is the phrase used to convey a population movement that results in more persons leaving the state for any reason than those who move into it.

In that previous census period, the division says, the number of persons leaving the state exceeded the number coming into it by about 53,000. There was a lesser loss during the 1960's. But the new census rule counts college students as residents of the communities where they are attending college. More students come into Wisconsin from other places than there are Wisconsin students leaving the state for study elsewhere. Thus there remained "out-migration", but it was significantly reduced from the movement of earlier times.

The census rule about the counting of students in the communities with colleges tends to render these figures subject to considerable qualification. The apparent population growth of some of the smaller cities of the state, in practical terms, is illusory. Such cities as River Falls, Menomonie, Stevens Point, Whitewater, among others, show gains that are largely attributable to the swelling of college enrollments there. Conversely, it is perhaps a solemn note for Platteville and Superior, as illustrations, that they had some out-migration in spite of the fact that they have sizeable state universities within them. The city of LaCrosse, which also has a state university, showed only a small in-migration in spite of the counting of college students as residents.

Curiously some of the rural counties which have tended to decline in populations for many years appear to have had that trend arrested. The division speculates that the growth of recreational industry in the northern zones may explain the change in part. There is also a tendency for more persons to retire to such localities. But in general the movement of population is toward areas of higher average incomes, and the rural-farm areas are taking most of the brunt of out-migration. Highest rates of population lost through migration were recorded during the last decade in Menominee, Taylor, Iron, Richland, Crawford, Langlade and Clark counties.

DISCOVERY

'Pat' Answers in Youth Work

Things do not always turn out as one would expect, and good intentions do not appear to help much, either.

Take the field of youth. A church goes to considerable expense to remodel and expand an area of its building into a "Youth Room." There's TV set, radio, pool table, table tennis. After a few months of considerable use, with the novelty worn off, the room is used only rarely by young people, except for weekly Bible classes.

A small town decides that its young people have "No place to go. No wonder so many end up in the wrong places." etc. So service clubs and others combine to provide the funds for a "Youth Center." Same story. After the novelty wears off, so does the use made of the facility.

Four states have for many years permitted voting before the age of 21, yet a recent survey conducted for the Democratic National Committee found that in Georgia, Hawaii, Kentucky and Alaska only 26 per cent of those under 21 eligible to vote did so in last November's election.

To generalize from such scattered instances would be dangerous, but they underscore a truth we easily forget, namely that young people are inconsistent individuals like all the rest of us, that they don't always know what they want—again, like all the rest of us, and that their well-intentioned elders can make mistakes in judgment — like all the rest of us.

It might also suggest that our young people want more than just "a place to go," or even tacit permission to cast their vote. There is mounting evidence that many of the younger generation are ready and waiting to be challenged into constructive action, and that we serve them best when we give them opportunity for wholesome, down-to-earth endeavors that serve our fellowman. They may well supply some needed spark. There are considerable indications that many young people are more sensitive to the needs of their fellowman than their elders. And this world of ours can use all of that quality available.

Government Closes Listening Post

President Nixon has said that he is anxious to bring government closer to the people. This was one of the themes of his campaign. He has woven it also into many of his proposals for changes in government structure and the part it must play in helping both the federal establishment and local governments to become more responsive to citizens.

One of the experiments the administration tried was to set up what it called the "President's Listening Post" on busy Broad Street in Philadelphia. The post was advertised as the answer to the problem of cutting through government red tape. It would enable, in theory at least, the public to "go right to the top" with complaints or suggestions.

Great fanfare accompanied its opening in late 1969. But after 15 months of operation, the post has been closed quietly and plans for similar posts in other parts of the country have been abandoned.

The Philadelphia post received about 250 communications during its life span, an average of 17 a month. Most of them were requests for information rather than to get action on complaints or to suggest ways in which bureaucratic red tape could be cut. Significantly enough, those in charge in Philadelphia found that they had difficulty piercing the red tape themselves and that it wasn't quite as easy to get action as the organizational blueprint suggested.

Nonetheless, the theory is still a good one and should be pursued. Citizens should have a direct means of making their gripes, complaints and requests for action known to government at all levels. They may not always get the answers or action they want, but at the very least they will know that they've been heard. That alone should help to remove the growing feeling among many citizens that government just is not now responsive to their concerns. This, in turn, can lead to an apathy which is fertile ground for the growth of even more bureaucracy.

Ballots Lost, So Vote Light

100 YEARS AGO
Quoted from the Appleton Crescent for April 15, 1871.

KAUKAUNA — By some mistake, the judicial ballots (for the Town of Kaukauna) were not to be found until late in the day, so a small vote was polled for judge.

J. F. Driessen, for four years town clerk, was chosen Chairman over C. C. Green, station agent, by 93 votes majority. He is not quite 26 (Driessen), and I suppose is the youngest member of the new County Board, and he is a Democrat.

William Labie and James Devine were elected supervisors, both well-esteemed citizens; A. J. Smits, a man well qualified was chosen Town Clerk.

That old resident, Peter Maes, was re-elected Treasurer for the fourth year by a majority of 176 votes.

Your good friend and capable man, Martin Gerrits, Esq. was chosen Assessor because he is best qualified to correct and revise assessment rolls of the Town.

25 YEARS AGO

"A Mind of Her Own" was the title of the senior class play at Hortonville High School. In the cast were students Donald Armitage, Dorothy Gabriel, Loretta Olk, Dick Buchman, Clara Jack, Arlo Nelson, Jackie Scholl, Ellen Ruth Behrend, Bill Ratzburg, Eugene Ridl, Dianne Hunt and Helen Lippold.

Four Appleton High School students chosen graduation night speakers were Jean Bunks, Yvonne Bestler, Charles Miller and Robert Schmid. The commencement program was set for June 6.

Oshkosh Philatelic Society President Erwin A. Weidemann was to discuss the program for the 15th annual convention of the Wisconsin Federation of Stamp Clubs planned for Green Bay in May. The Dr. Harold O. Beglinger, Neenah, was in charge of the dinner for the planning session. Charles J. Pierce, Oshkosh, regional president, was to discuss the post history project and Edward D. Hamilton, secretary of the Oshkosh Society, was to talk on the inflation of the stamp.

10 YEARS AGO

Mrs. Virgil Reynebeau was elected president of the Kimberly Homemakers Club. Other officers were Mrs. Jack Van Himbergen, vice president; Mrs. Clarence Kilsdonk, secretary, and Mrs. Clarence De Wildt, treasurer.

Dr. Minoo Adenwalla, teacher of Asian studies at Lawrence College, spoke to the Wausau American Association of University women on the language and politics in India.

Four Twin City young people were to compete in the state forensics tournament in Madison. They were Mary Davis, Menasha High School student, Kathy Suess, James Fuller and Sue Makofski, of St. Mary High School.

Television Net Reveals Nixon Campaign Being Organized

BY KEVIN P. PHILLIPS

WASHINGTON — There was egg — and embarrassment — on the faces of Nixon political staffers last week as CBS-TV and several newspapers ripped the veil away from the President's "secret" re-election headquarters at 1701 Pennsylvania Avenue.

Despite the administration's half-hearted, nominal assertion that the 1701 operation is simply a citizens' group — ("Citizens for Re-election of the President"— it obviously is the beginning of Mr. Nixon's 1972 campaign organization. Right now, the staff is a collection of middle-level aides, but bigger guns will move in later.

The White House's reluctance earlier last week to reply candidly to media inquiries had several motivations. It was not so much a question of secrecy— several undeclared Democratic presidential candidates have similar operations — as of timing. First of all, Nixon aides say that they did not want the story to leak until after the President's April 7 telecast on Indochina. Nor did they want publicity until they had been able to inform GOP politicos (who like to hear about such developments from the White House, instead of finding out about them in the media). Several stories were cooperatively held back while Nixon aides hurriedly telephoned important Republican politicians.

The White House is also concerned about rebutting false impressions in some quarters. For example, the idea that the "citizens" operation is the imminent vehicle of Attorney General John Mitchell, who will supposedly be leaving the government in September to manage Mr. Nixon's 1972 campaign. Another false impression is that the 1701 operation will be a front for the strategies of Murray Chotiner, whose new law office happens to be located in the same building.

Understandably, the name of Murray Chotiner, until recently special counsel to the President, is a red flag to the press corps. Richard Nixon's oldest political mentor, Chotiner scripted the campaigns, from 1946 to 1970, that have made his name and the President's anathema to a generation of liberals.

However, sources close to the President maintain that Chotiner has been firmly told to practice law and keep a low political profile during 1971. While his advice is welcome, his overt political activity is not. Chotiner's flair for controversy has been heightened by a sticky divorce situation. His third spouse is now in the process of completing a book about the political and marital difficulties of being Mrs. Chotiner.

According to presidential advisers, Chotiner has no role in the operation to be run out of 1701, and the location of his own law office there is an unfortunate coincidence.

As it happens, Nixon aides began negotiating for the 1701 office space before Chotiner signed on with a law firm in the same building."

Fanciful Idea

Even as other Nixonmen fidgeted over what the press would make of the geographical coincidence, Chotiner himself did not become aware of the situation until about ten days ago, and he regards the notion that he is masterminding the headquarters operations as fanciful indeed.

As for Attorney General Mitchell, reports that he will be leaving his post in September to take over campaign operations seem premature. Mitchell has told associates that inside dopesters will look foolish when autumn has come and gone, with the incumbent remaining at the Justice Department.

While Mitchell is ultimately expected to run Mr. Nixon's re-election campaign, his exit from the Justice Department, plus the choice of a successor, is by no means final at this date.

The President and his strategy committee will probably keep top-level arrangements flexible until late summer or fall, when it becomes apparent whether the President will face a meaningful challenge in the spring 1972 primaries. In the meantime, it makes sense to begin organizing technical and middle-level functions ranging from fund-raising to state and local coordination. This is what 1701 Pennsylvania Avenue is all about.

Natural Resources Department Success Recalls Opposition

BY JOHN WYNGAARD
Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — If the politics of the Kellett state government administrative reorganization of three years ago is remembered at a future time, it will probably be because of the angry and stubborn resistance to the logic of the idea of a comprehensive Department of Natural Resources that was mounted by the so-called "red shirt" lobby.

In retrospect some of the measures indulged by the angry "sportsmen's" organizations appear ridiculous, including the stunt contrived by a misguided publicity man at the instance of the sporting clubs that involved the ostentatious driving of a bulldozer around Capitol Square as a symbolic representation of the contrived fears for the interests of the hunter and fisherman.

One officer identified with the conservation cause during most of a good lifetime was so heavily involved in that absurdity as to cloud the memory of his otherwise distinguished career.

Tentative Verdict Good

A tentative verdict can now be suggested. Unified state government natural resource and environmental regulation, protection and management work has won acceptance. Modifications out of experience will be minor. The new program is operative. Not a whisper of criticism is being heard with respect to administrative organization. Policy differences, of course, would be involved in any system.

Yet the time elapsed has been short and careful men won't render a final verdict. Administrators of the new Department of Natural Resources are aware of close attention in their constituency — including the "red shirt" interests. Secretary Lester P. Voigt has proceeded with great caution in shaping the traditional organization to new mandates and problems.

Only this month, for example, is the district organization of his consolidated jurisdiction being completed with the appointment of district directors who will be deputy chiefs of staff in the operating regions to all intents and purposes. Voigt's choices showed that he pondered carefully and well.

Federal Agency Talked

But perhaps the most persuasive evidence of the wisdom and the timing of the merger legislation for resource programs comes from Washington. There is now serious talk by serious men in conservation about a similar Department of Natural Resources to embrace the numerous and separated programs of the national government.

"Over a period of several years the conservation community has generally been recommending the creation of a comprehensive Department of Natural Resources to replace the outmoded Department of Interior and to include the many related functions scattered among various departments and agencies throughout the federal government," says the bulletin of the Sport Fishing Institute. President Nixon has now laid precisely that proposition before the Congress.

Creation of the Wisconsin DNR reflected the reality that resource and environmental issues long since transcended the narrow interests of the hunters and fishermen which, however valued in providing support for the first primitive state conservation programs, had long since been shown to provide too narrow a base and perspective for multiplying problems and the magnified public interest in such matters.

A visitor who has regularly attended policy deliberations of state officers on natural resources issues over several decades finds the contrast in the board room of today and yesterday as sharp as it is refreshing.

Discussion Was Limited

Earlier conservation commissioners typically disputed loudly and at length on trout size limits, the size of mesh (pronounced "mash" for reasons this listener never understood) in commercial fishing nets, raccoon hunting, pike planting, warden assignments, ad infinitum. These were the "red shirt" days, although there were notable exceptions in the appointment now and again of more broad-gauged men.

Today sporting aspects intrude only occasionally. Board members talk about basic ecological issues. Rarely is an angry word heard. Technicians are heeded respectfully.

Parents' Hypocrisy Damaging to Children

BY SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Children are not so much ruined by either extreme of discipline or permissiveness as by hypocrisy, which is far more rampant than either; for a child can learn to cope with rigidity or flacidity— what he cannot handle is the parental abyss between preachment and practice, between form and substance, between the conscious rectitude and the unconscious gratification of selfish needs, which he sees so clearly.

When we persuade people before we instruct them, we merely produce fanatics who betray our cause, more than disciples who advance it.

The unforgiving man assumes a judgment that not even the theologians have given to God.

Poor players blame their results on the cards; but the good player doesn't get better cards, or even necessarily play them any better; what he is best at is waiting.

A man who freely and frankly admits a mistake grows in our estimation: but a government never admits a mistake, and falsely imagines that concealing or mislabeling an error preserves its public image, when even a child can detect the discrepancy between statement and fact.

The mindless mobs who stone police stations are composed of the same people who would be outraged by a mindless mob storming a police station in order to lynch a prisoner held there.

To belittle oneself is more often a form of inverse arrogance than of modesty; as Einstein once remarked of a self-effacing colleague: "He has no right to be so modest— he is not all that great."

Scores of "religious" people write to me, urging that I read this or that passage in the Bible, to become convinced of the truth; what such zealots fail to realize is that nobody believes because he reads the Bible, but he reads the Bible because he believes (and if he doesn't know how to believe, his reading is more likely to stunt him than expand him.)

When a rebel is successful enough to adopt a uniform, he becomes as autocratic as those he denounces.

It is the worst therapy to advise someone "not to worry" when it is the very activity of worrying that keeps him from doing something desperate and foolish.

The conservative believes that "left to themselves, things will get better"; the liberal believes that "left to themselves, things will get worse"; the sensible person believes that, left to themselves, some things will get better, some will get worse, and others will remain the same — it being the task of intelligence to distinguish among them.

Editors Weigh Advisability of Ethics Council

By CARL C. CRAFT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Editors are stepping carefully as they explore whether some sort of grievance committee or American press council is needed to oversee newspaper ethics.

"Our problem, it seems to me, is certainly not merely one of public relations," says Erwin D. Canham, editor-in-chief of the Christian Science Monitor.

"It is one of the long-range role of newspapers at a time and in a world which needs honest and accurate information, and, independent and courageous expression of opinion," he told the American Society of Newspaper Editors Wednesday.

"I think we must hold and strengthen—perhaps restore—public confidence in our capacity to fulfill the principles to which we are committed," said Canham.

Need for Professionalism

An ASNE panel which he headed 'concluded there is certainly a need for more responsible and conscientious professional performance by newspapers," Canham added.

That panel, he said, decided most grievance problems "can be met by a more intelligent, more responsible performance on the part of individual newspapers."

Instead of recommending ASNE set up a press council or grievance-handling group as national machinery to deal with complaints against its member newspapers, the panel proposed an experiment.

As approved by society directors, the ASNE study group is prepared for "a kind of very informal dry run," to see what might have happened had a press council or grievance committee been created to deal with specific cases, Canham said.

Repugnant Idea

ASNE President Newbold Noyes Jr., editor of Washington's Evening Star, said: "There is, to me, something repugnant about the idea that we as a Society should gang up on an individual editor whose concept of what is best for his newspaper or his readers differs from that of a select committee or even a majority of the rest of us," Noyes said.

He added that while the directors "are rather sharply divided on the issue," the board agrees no moves will be made "without coming back to the membership and making sure that what we are doing in this is what the membership wants done."

"Aren't we beating our breast about something that has always been with us?" asked John McCormally, president and publisher of the Burlington (Iowa) Hawk-Eye. "The press has always been criticized."

Rising Criticism

"If I read the public right, I think there is a rising criticism," said John Emmerich, editorial page editor of the Houston Chronicle, "and I'm inclined to think we ought to respond in the best way we can—although I'm not convinced a press council is going to be the ultimate answer.

"We certainly can't lose anything by proceeding with this dry run," he added.

John E. McMullan, executive editor of the Philadelphia Inquirer, wondered "if we aren't in danger of embarking on a sort of witch hunt."

Noyes replied: "That is the reason we want to go very slowly and carefully . . . and explore the whole thing thoroughly before we get into it."

Tate Jurors Subpoened

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jurors in the Sharon Tate murder trial have been subpoenaed by the defense to testify Monday about their deliberations that led to conviction and death verdicts for Charles Manson and three women followers.

The seven men and five women were asked to appear at a hearing set for formal sentencing of the defendants and arguments on motions for a new trial.

Chief defense attorney Paul Fitzgerald said Wednesday the four-man defense team also wants to ask jurors about "any conduct during their sequestration which could have prevented fair deliberations."

Penal Code

According to the penal code, he said, one of the grounds for a new trial is a jury being "guilty of any misconduct whereby fair deliberations are prevented."

The same jury which convicted Manson and the women of murder and conspiracy in the seven Tate slayings decreed death March 29 after a penalty trial. The defense seeks to challenge both verdicts. The judge must rule on whether the defense may call jurors to the witness stand.

"There are several points we want to talk to them about," Fitzgerald said. They include: a financial deal reportedly proposed by one juror to others to sell their story, the possibility that jurors weren't shielded from trial news coverage, whether there were compromises made during deliberations, and whether jurors were influenced by others during the period they lived at home during the penalty trial.

The jurors were sequestered in a hotel for seven months of the 9½-month trial. They were allowed to live at home through most of the eight-week penalty phase.

Convicted with Manson, 36, were Patricia Krenwinkel, 23, Susan Atkins, 22, and Leslie Van Houten, 21. Since the verdict, Fitzgerald said, the three women have had their hair sheared in a nearly bald crew cut imitative of Manson's shaved head style.

Cure for Common Cold Claimed by Scientist

CHICAGO (AP) — A new antivirus drug is reportedly able to cure the common cold within 24 hours.

Dr. Paul Gordon of Chicago Medical School, who discovered the drug, called NPT-10381, said it also is effective against other virus diseases such as influenza and chickenpox.

Dr. Eric R. Brown, chairman of the microbiology department of the Chicago Medical School, said, "We are very excited about this compound because it is the first effective antiviral agent . . . that appears to have broad application for humans."

The Argentine government approved the drug for general use on April 8. It has not been cleared for general use in this country.

Gordon and Dr. Alvin J. Glasky, president of Newport Pharmaceuticals, Inc., of Newport Beach, Calif., which manufactures NPT-10381, presented reports at the 55th annual meeting of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology.

The approval of NPT-10381 in Argentina followed a clinical study by 17 doctors who reported that it stopped fever, headache, weakness, lack of appetite and rapid heart beat in cold victims within 24 hours, Glasky said.

Argentine doctors concluded that NPT-10381 also has "amazing" ability to knock out other virus infections in humans and animals, the conference was told. Tests indicated no toxic or deleterious side effects.

Gordon and Glasky said the drug also is being tested in 20 medical centers in the United States, Germany, Mexico and several other countries. It has been administered to more than 500 persons.

Dog Slips Dogcatcher As Dogcatcher Slips

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A dogcatcher attempting to capture a stray German shepherd has accidentally shot himself with a tranquilizer dart.

Gerald R. Watson, 43, the unintended victim, was called Wednesday to a residence on the southeast side of town where he found the dog hiding under a porch.

Police said the tranquilizer gun discharged when Watson dropped it. A dart struck him in the neck. Watson was hospitalized in fair condition.

The dog slipped away.

Both Parties Hard at Work Trying to Woo Young Vote

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Both the Republican and Democratic parties are already at work on devising a strategy to win support of the 11 million 18-to-20-year-olds eligible to vote in next year's presidential election.

At this early stage party leaders' thinking reflects the political arithmetic of public opinion polls that indicate most college students favor neither party, but among those who do the Democrats are preferred by almost 2 to 1.

Thus, Democratic National Chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien talks in terms of registration drives, while his Republican counterpart, Sen. Robert J. Dole, emphasizes the need to sell young people on the GOP.

"It's almost a nuts-and-bolts thing," said O'Brien in an interview. 'We're going to do everything we can to register young people in goodly numbers and our hope is that they'll side with us."

"Keep Our Share"

"You've got to go after them," Dole told an interviewer. "We recognize that it can be a gold mine or a dry hole, in the oil industry vernacular. We won't get them all, nor will the Democrats, but we can't afford to lose our share."

Both men agree the new voters could play a decisive role. O'Brien put it this way: "I'm a realist. I think in sheer numbers. This is a significant statistic in terms of eligibility. They could have a great impact."

They could have, assuming that either party can get them to the polls. Experience in the four states that already permit 18-year-olds to vote is not encouraging. Census Bureau figures show, for example, that 55 per cent of the voters in the four states—Georgia, Kentucky, Alaska and Hawaii—went to the polls in the 1970 off-year election, but only 26 per cent of those between 18 and 20 voted.

Contact Non-Students

The two major parties also face another problem. The 1970 Gallup Poll on party preferences among the young covered only college students. But the majority of the 11 million young voters are not in college. Four million of them are working, 1.5 million are housewives, and 800,000 are in the armed forces.

"How do you contact the nonstudent?" asked Dole. "Through business or unions?"

To find the answer, each party has appointed a youth coordinator to devise ways of appealing to both the student and the nonstudent.

Miss Nancy Payne, a 23-year-old graduate of Connecticut College for Women, has charge of organizing youth activities for the Republican National Committee.

Budget Undetermined

A pretty blonde from Portland, Maine, Miss Payne and four other salaried staffers are coordinating college and Young Republican groups as well as meeting with union and welfare officials. She said the budget is still undetermined.

"We have to educate the Republican Party about what young people are thinking," Miss Payne said. "We would like to aim for 35 per cent of those who vote."

She and her staff hope to coordinate campus speaking efforts of Republican congressmen and senators. "We want to know where they are, how they did and where they're going."

Miss Payne's Democratic counterpart is Phil Seib, a 22-year-old Washingtonian who graduated last year from Princeton University.

Close Election

Seib predicts the 1972 election will be close, and adds:

"We have to realize that these votes could win it for us. Remember, Richard Nixon was elected by 300,000 votes nationally." Actually, President Nixon beat Democrat Hubert H. Humphrey by 511,944 popular votes.

Seib said he and two fulltime salaried staffers have no budget, but "scrape up money whenever we need it."

He and his team have set up voter registration programs directed towards first-time voters in 25 states.

"In all other states, we're one or two steps away from seeing these programs initiated," he said. "They aren't necessarily statewide, but in each state we've got something going."

Is there any way to corral the 11 million potential voters into a "youth bloc?"

Little Difference

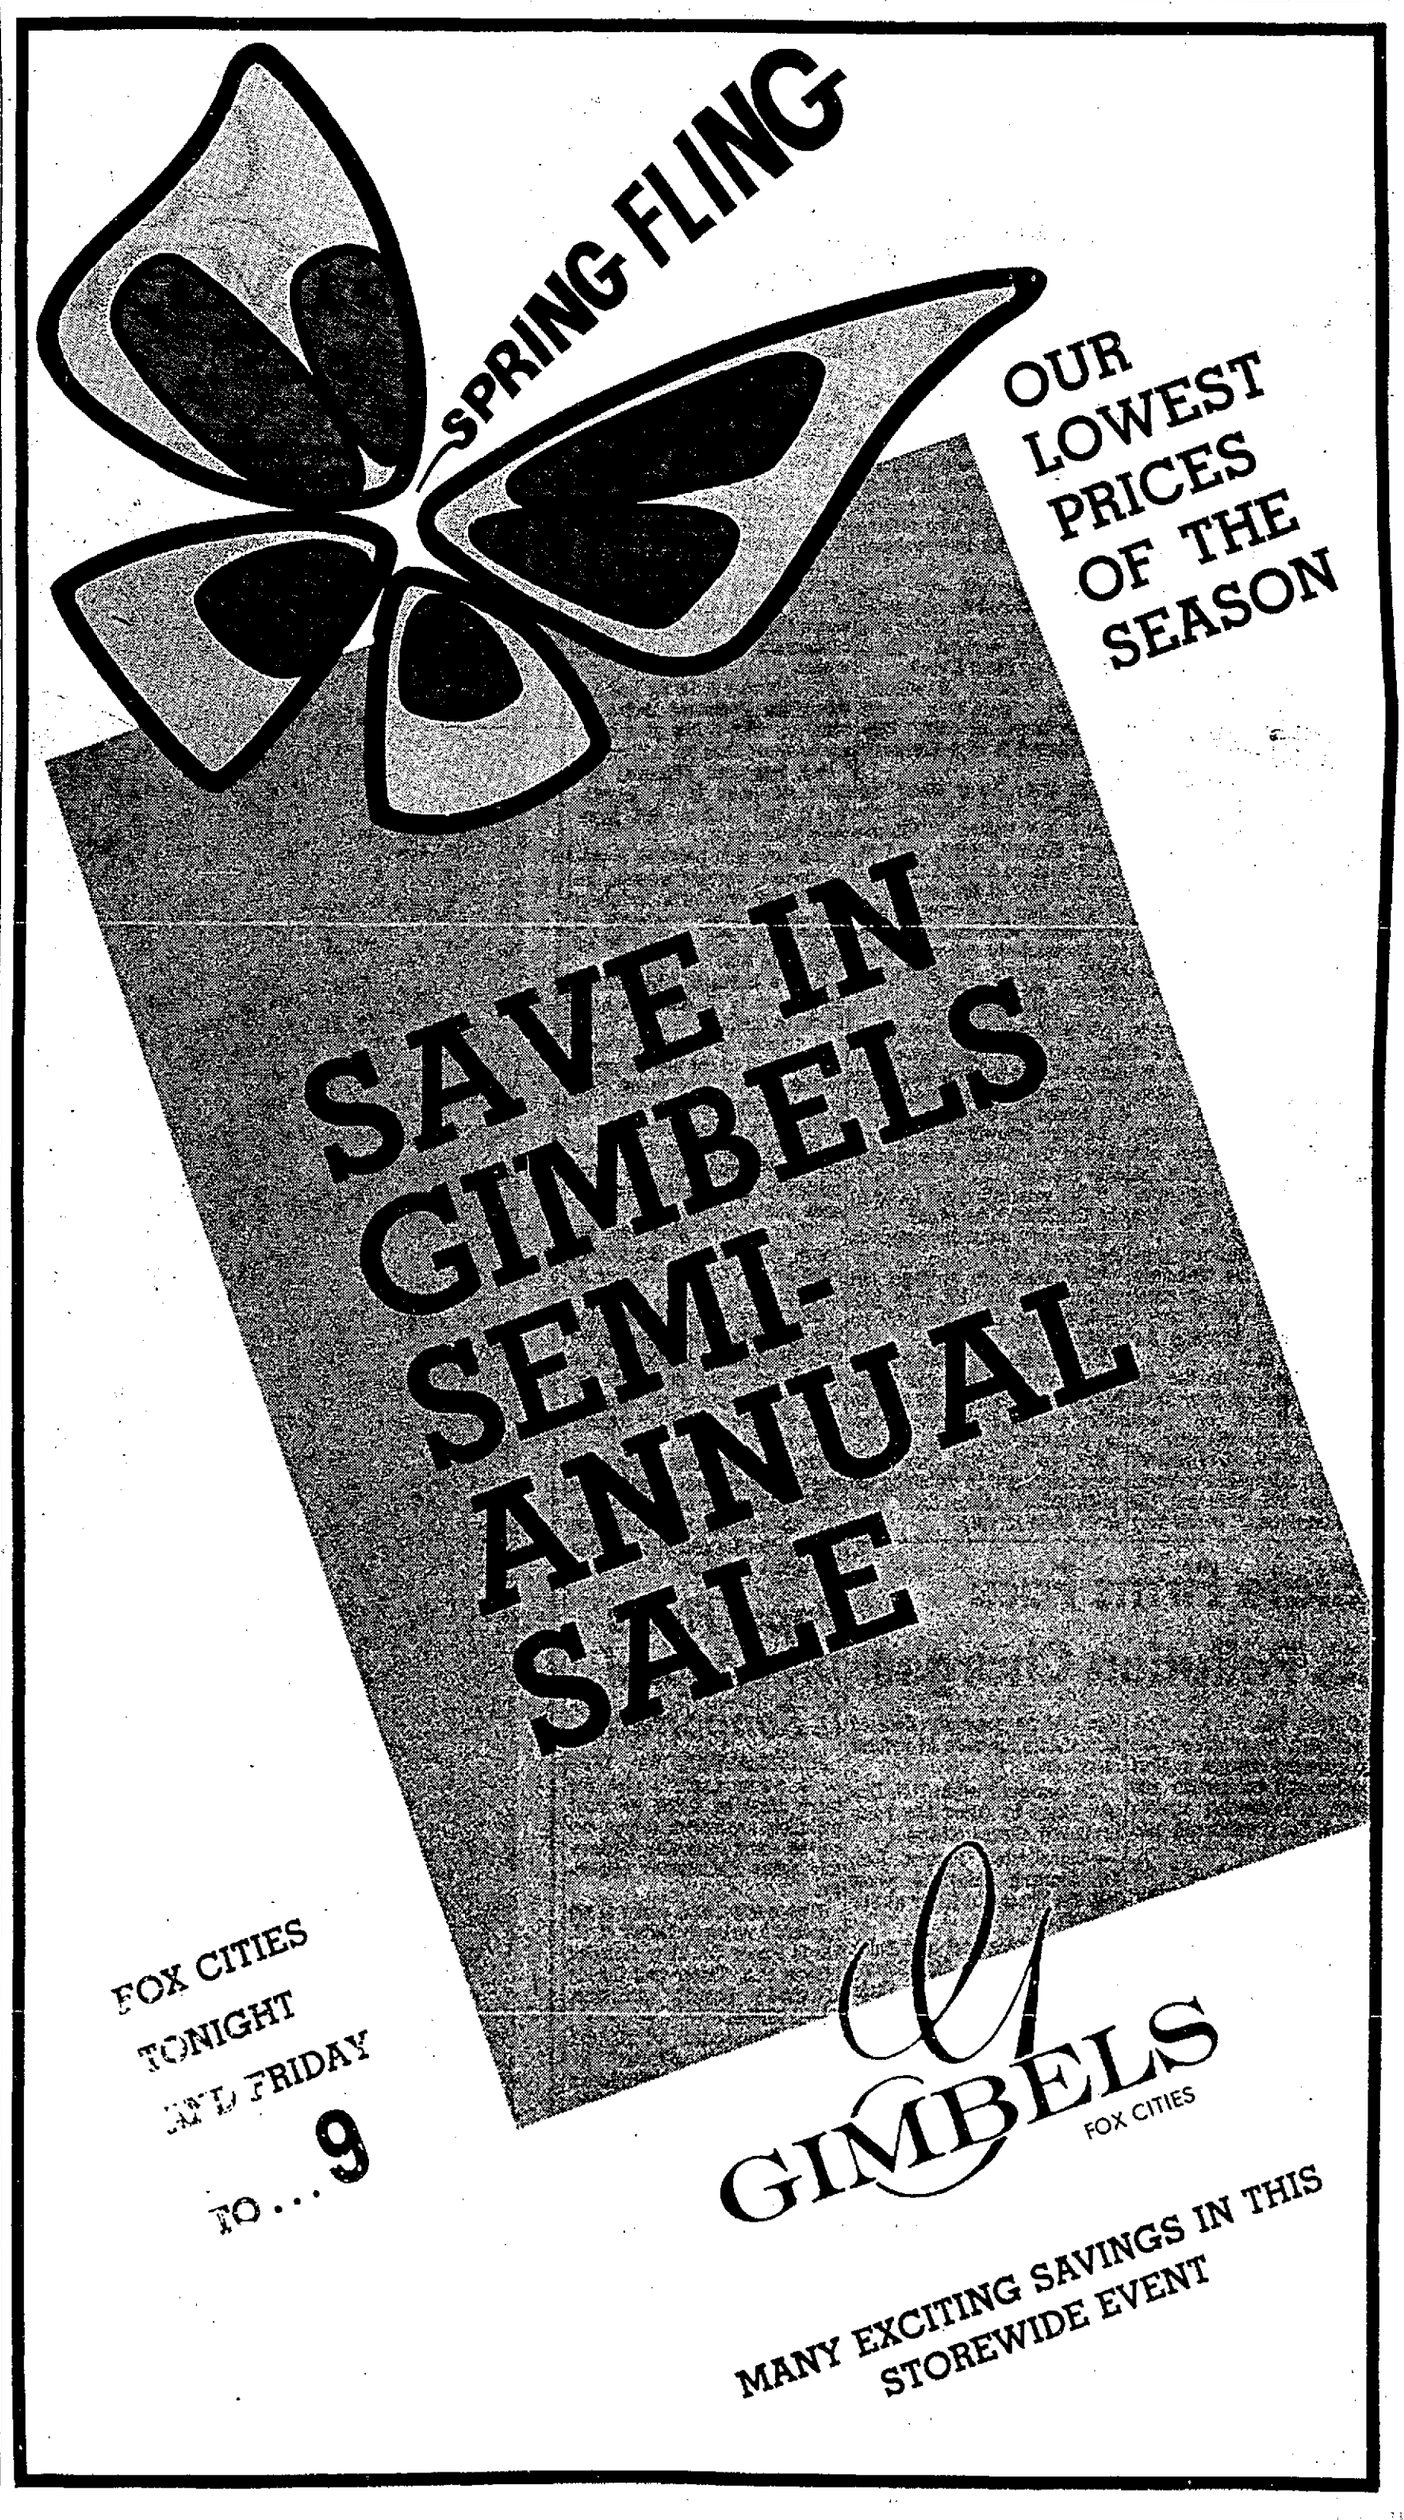
Political analyst Richard Scammon, author of "The Real Majority," doesn't think so.

"Youth isn't going to vote in any homogeneous way," he said in an interview. "What is it about young people that differs from the rest of the country? The fact of the matter is, there isn't much."

So far the party leaders indicate they agree. Each is approaching the youth vote in a traditional way, the Democrats counting on a built-in-margin, and the Republicans working on ways to win support for their programs.

The prize, as Scammon made plain, is worth the effort.

"Youngsters will vote maybe half in number," he said. "Half of 11 million, in an election that might be 51 to 49, it could make a difference."



'Buy Black' Campaign Starts in South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — If David Thebehali has his way, his people will "think black" and "buy black."

Most South Africans are black. The white-run government enforces a policy of apartheid, or separate development of races.

Thebehali is a member of the township council in the black suburban complex called Soweto. He insists his movement, so far nameless, has none of the militant overtones he ascribes to the Black Power movement in the United States.

"In an integrationist society it might not have been necessary, but I think it is very necessary for blacks to work this way in present circumstances," he says. "I think the movement is catching on."

Thebehali wants blacks to support shops christened with tribal instead of English names, and to encourage separatist operations such as the all-black South African Students Organization.

He also wants separate black church organizations even within larger multiracial churches such as Anglican and Roman Catholic.

At a recent African Chamber of Commerce meeting, he called on members to improve their services and facilities so that they can compete favorably with white-owned businesses.

Thebehali says blacks should demand treatment as equals within the strictures of apartheid. His movement does not include Asians or mullatoes, the people known here as Coloreds. Blacks here are often called Africans; some of their leaders discourage this practice, although such names as the African Chamber of Commerce remain.

Hermanus J. van der Merwe, manager of the Chamber of Commerce that is not "African," expresses doubt that the Thebehali campaign will amount to much.

He says black merchants will not solve their problems by asking their people to buy only in nonwhite areas.

Shops in black townships are not always conveniently situated, he added.

Van der Merwe said the movement appeared to be trying to introduce a factor into trading which his Chamber of Commerce has always tried to avoid.

A white businessman said: "I think Africans get the best deal from white traders who buy in bulk. Their prices cannot be matched in the townships."

Hutchins Gives AFDC Breakdown

BY SANDRA SHACKELFORD
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Where does the taxpayer's dollar go? What makes up the AFDC (Aid to Families with Dependent Children) rolls? How do Wisconsin's welfare ranks stack up with other states?

Jerome Hutchins, client service specialist for the Division of Family Services of the Green Bay regional office, spoke Tuesday night to a group of Concerned Outagamie Mothers at Trinity English Lutheran Church, answering these questions with a slide presentation.

In reviewing the state's budget of $742,905,400 for 1969-70, he explained that the Department of Public Instruction receives $300,993,200; the Department of Health and Social Services, $173,581,400; the University of Wisconsin, $99,641,000; the State University System, $55,926,500 with other departments collecting $112,763,300. These sums do not include funds spent on highway or conservation programs.

Monetary Breakdown

Of the $173,581,400 allotted to the Department of Health and Social Services, the monetary breakdown reads; $85,000 for the Division of Aging; $3,752,400 for the Division of Health; $3,495,100 for the Division of Vocational Rehabilitation; $3,515,300 for the Division of Business Management and Executive Services; $23,594,700 for the Division of Corrections; $49,891,400 for the Division of Mental Hygiene and $89,247,200 for the Division of Family Services.

The AFDC caseload for 1969-70 as of July 1 totaled 21,000 in the state, which, said Hutchins, was an increase of 987 over the previous year. He said, however, that over 12,000 cases were closed during the same period.

Green Bay's representative told the COM group that of every 1,000 children in New York, 126 were recipients of AFDC funds. In contrast, of 1,000 children in Wisconsin, 38 receive assistance for which each taxpayer is taxed $10.40 per year.

Children are the prime receivers of funds amounting to $12,422,500 while adults are allotted $4,218,100.

Hutchins told the group that of the 19,037 adults who made up the AFDC caseload in December of 1969, 85.29 per cent were mothers who were needed at home by children who were very young, or who needed special supervision; mothers who were employed but did not make enough money to support the household; mothers who were unemployed but couldn't find jobs, or mothers who were unemployed because they couldn't get adequate day care for their children.

The remaining 14.71 per cent are fathers who are incapacitated or who are needed at home to care for children because there is no mother and no adequate day care.

Wisconsin's AFDC monthly basic allowance ranges from $380 for a family of 12 down to $67 for a family of one. This allowance excludes shelter.

Why the increases in the AFDC program?

Hutchins gave six reasons. An increase in the number of people of marriageable age and more and more earlier marriages; increase in divorce, desertion and illegitimacy; inflation causing family breakup in economically marginal families; the U.S. Supreme Court decision removing the residency requirement; the Wisconsin Attorney General's opinion that stepchildren are eligible for AFDC and the efforts of anti-poverty groups to have financially needy and eligible persons apply for AFDC.

A group advisor in the audience criticized the use of the word "cases" in reference not only to the women present but to all those receiving assistance.

"If you go around the state with these slides, you will perpetuate the idea that these mothers and these children are cases."

The client service specialist said that the critique was well taken but the word was part of the social worker's terminology.

Conservationists, Officials Disagree on Mercury Ban

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — A bill that would prohibit the dumping of mercury into the state's waterways after July and provide for a $10 to $5,000 fine for dumping was described as not strong or broad enough by spokesmen for environmental protection groups, and so strong as to be unenforceable by a representative of the Department of Natural Resources.

Peter Anderson, speaking in behalf of an environmental action group, told the Assembly Natural Resources committee that the bill proposed by Rep. Tommy Thompson, R-Elroy, does not go far enough in regulating the discharge of mercury. He said that prohibition of dumping mercury into the water will simply lead manufacturers to emit it into the air.

Anderson proposed that the fine be raised to a maximum of $50,000 because, he said, companies can store mercury and dump it all at once, thereby saving a lot of money in fines. They should be strongly penalized for that action, he said. He further proposed that the legislature expand the ban to other heavy metals since all are dangerous, all affect the nervous system and some are more harmful than mercury which has simply had more attention.

Texas Has Law

Dennis Sustare, Madison, a representative of the Wisconsin Resource Conservation Council, told the committee that Texas has passed a law limiting discharge of about 15 heavy metals and that example should be followed here.

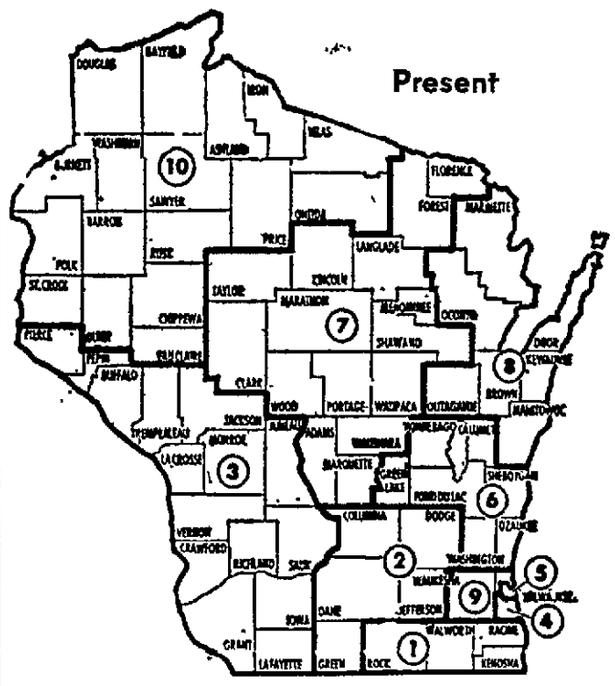
He suggested that an absolute restriction on the dumping of mercury for industry, and no restriction on its emission by sewage treatment plants would be unworkable. He said that the setting of limits is "ticklish." If, he said, there is a maximum, industry will only restrict pollution to that amount. If there is no restriction on the amount of mercury a sewage plant can release he said, industry will not be limited, because it can send its mercury to the sewage plant.

To avoid the pitfalls, Sustare recommended the legislature set a maximum amount of mercury that can be emitted and also a concentration of mercury that may be reached in the water. He suggested a better method of controlling harmful effluent by means of keeping balanced inventories for each industry. A company would be required to report the amount and kind of raw material it takes in and then account for the use and outflow — through finished products, air and water emission and burial of those materials and face stiff fines for fraudulent records.

Oliver Williams of the Department of Natural Resources told the committee it would not be wise to legislate absolute levels of emission permitted. He said that a better approach would be to require that mercury effluent be reduced as much as technology will permit and to allow the DNR through its rulemaking authority to update the levels permitted as technology advances.

Thompson told the committee he introduced the bill in response to the "mercury scare" last summer that resulted in the closing of the Wisconsin River after heavy concentrations of mercury were found in fish.

The mercury contamination, he said, resulted in a severe effect on the tourist and recreation industry in Adams and Juneau counties which he represents. Those two counties, he said, lost an estimated one million dollars they otherwise would have expected last summer because of the problem.



Wisconsin Congressional Districts

Wisconsin's Congressional redistricting moved into legislature Wednesday when a bipartisan bill setting new district lines was introduced by Democratic Sen. Fred Risser of Madison and Republican Sen. Robert Knowles of New Richmond. The plan reduces the state's congressional delegation from 10 to nine.

Assembly Asks Abortion Clinic Injunction

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The Wisconsin Assembly — looking askance at a Madison abortion clinic — asked Atty. Gen. Robert W. Warren Wednesday to seek an injunction against allegedly illegal abortions in Wisconsin.

The resolution directs Warren to prohibit the Midwest Medical Center of Madison from performing any abortions not expressly permitted by present state laws. In operation about two months, the clinic performs abortions for women on an outpatient basis.

The constitutionality of Wisconsin's abortion statute is presently being appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court after two lower federal courts held portions of it were unconstitutional.

The resolution, authored by Rep. Gerald D. Kleczka, D-Milwaukee, passed 83-17.

Maier's Visit to Village Was 'Nicer Than 4th of July'

MOUNT CALVARY, Wis. (AP) — Milwaukee Mayor Henry Maier toasted this small village Wednesday with a glass of beer and his ideas of what Gov. Patrick J. Lucey's tax re-distribution plan can do for them.

Maier led a group of 12 urban officials to the rural village east of Fond du Lac to dramatize his claim that not only urban areas would benefit from the proposal but smaller towns as well.

He told a small audience of villagers at the Community Hall that Mount Calvary could have saved $7.88 per $1,000 of full property assessment under the Lucey proposal in 1970.

His group of urban officials then passed the "Mount Calvary resolution" urging regional meetings and possibly a statewide gathering in Madison to support Lucey's plan.

Benefit by Bill

The resolution is to go out to 1,400 communities which Maier said would benefit by the Lucey bill.

The meeting was Maier's latest reaction to what he calls a "war chest" of funds set up by a group of Milwaukee suburbs to help lobby against the bill.

"We are the representatives of 1,400 villages, towns and cities," Maier said. "We're the vast majority of the population which has been paying the freight for the 'haves.'"

Kenosha Mayor Wallace Burkee, president of the Wisconsin Alliance of Cities, told rural areas that larger cities would do their part in lobbying for passage of the bill.

"We're willing to do the job for you, but contact your local representatives to do your part," Burkee told villagers.

Mayor Ralph Voigt of Merrill charged the Milwaukee suburbs fighting the bill were not the "Tax Sense Group," which they call themselves, but a "tax senseless" group.

Villagers at the meeting seemed to take the business part of Maier's stop in stride, and appeared more excited simply because he was visiting their village with its population of 942.

Villagers peeked out from doors or gathered on sidewalks earlier in the day as Maier and his entourage arrived with a quick tour up Main Street.

Bennor Brenner, a mason, said Maier's visit was "nicer than the Fourth of July." Others compared it to a firemen's picnic.

Flags were hung along the wide street, and some storeowners had posted "Welcome Mayor Maier" signs. A bartender said he washed his windows in honor of the event.

Laura Hau, who runs a grocery store with her husband, felt particularly honored when Maier stopped in and purchased a corn cob pipe.

Ring of Bologna

Maier didn't play any favorites, however. He bought a pound of ring baloney and some liver sausage at the meat market across the street.

Le Roy Schneider, president-elect of the village, was pleased with the day.

"Who wouldn't want to be in the limelight?" he asked.

Schneider said he supports the Lucey bill.

"Our taxes are average, not unbearable. But I'd hate like heck to see them go up," he said.

Many villagers said they're hopeful any tax changes would help them eventually be able to afford sewers, their most pressing problem.

But, for the day, they were more interested in watching the "dignitaries" make their way down Main Street.

State Pay Proposal Criticized

Employes Claim 'Inadequate' Is An Understatement

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Spokesmen for the Wisconsin State Employes Association expressed dissatisfaction Wednesday over a pay proposal which they dismissed as less than inadequate.

"To say that the proposal is wholly inadequate is a gross understatement," Robert Pease, association president, said.

"I still think there's a chance of a negotiated settlement," Lawrence Gremmier, bargaining committee chairman, said.

Personnel Board chairman John H. Shiels, however, said the proposal is "as equitable as possible under the over-all austere requirements."

The three were among witnesses during a public hearing of the legislature's Joint Finance Committee at the Capitol concerning state government wages.

Gov. Patrick J. Lucey has ordered the Personnel Board to come up with a pay plan costing no more than $38 million.

Pay increases approved for state employes in the legislature's last session cost more than $50 million.

The pay plan provides a $25-per-month, across-the-board increase for employes, including the cost-of-living increases to which they are entitled under Wisconsin law.

It also increases night differential pay to 15 cents an hour from 10 cents.

A parade of state employes complained to the committee of working conditions which they said wouldn't be tolerated by workers in private industry.

An employe at the state prison in Waupun told the committee he gets 13 weekends off each year.

"That doesn't give you too much time to do things with your family," prison worker A. J. Kahl said.

Other employes told of having to work late night shifts without advance notice, and of not being paid overtime for work on Saturday or Sunday, even if those were their regular days off.

The pay proposal drawn by the Personnel Board would cost $22.6 million for salary increases, $2 million for additional fringe benefits and $13.2 million for merit increases.

4 State Firms Face U.S. Pollution Charges

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Federal pollution investigation has led to criminal charges against four Wisconsin companies and a threat of injunction against two more, the government said Wednesday.

All six companies are accused by the Justice Department of violating the 1899 Refuse Act, under which discharge of waste into navigable waters is prohibited.

The list of alleged offenders announced by U.S. Atty. John O. Olson included five firms which had been cited for the Justice Department last year by Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis.

Charges stem from an investigation by Olson's office in Madison and the federal Environmental Protection Agency, Olson said. The criminal citations call for fines of up to $2,500.

Reuss has said there are 270 firms in Wisconsin which could face action under the 1899 act. The government has used the law against polluters in other states.

The law allows plaintiffs to receive shares of any fines. Reuss has said any slice of financial penalty turned over to him will be promptly donated to the state for care of natural resources.

The charges filed in U.S. District Court by Olson cite these firms and alleged offenses:

—Consolidated Papers Inc., for dumping industrial waste into the Wisconsin River at Stevens Point.

—Moody Chevrolet and Buick Co. of River Falls, for allowing oily matter to reach a St. Croix River tributary, the Kinnickinnic.

—Wisconsin Dairies Co-Op of Union Center, for depositing milk waste in the Baraboo River.

—Genoa Cooperative Creamery Co. of Genoa, for discharging milk waste into the Mississippi River.

Olson also requested injunctions against alleged discharge of waste by Arvey Corp. of Merrill and Wausau Paper Mills Co. of Brokaw.

He said the Brokaw firm and Arvey's Ward Paper Co. division were allowing wastes into the Wisconsin River.

The action against the River Falls auto firm, Olson said, stems from a complaint filed by a citizen.

Paper Firm's DNR Appeal Is Supported

RHINELANDER, Wis. (AP) — A paper maker's plea for more time in which to meet pollution abatement orders received some sympathy Wednesday from Rhinelander citizenry.

Eighteen persons spoke at an appeals hearing in behalf of St. Regis Paper Co. They included Mayor P.A. Taylor and Oneida County board's chairman, Lloyd Miller.

The Department of Natural Resources has directed St. Regis to install antipollution equipment by June 1. The firm told the department hearing that installation is underway, but cannot be concluded before 1972.

Should the firm be forced to close in the absence of complete installation, spokesmen said there would be employment setbacks for many of the 1,100 persons employed by the mill.

No one spoke in opposition to the firm's request for a postponement of the department's deadline.

The company also has been told to halt its sulfite pulp operations by June 1.

WALK RIGHT IN AND FEEL AT HOME

Your Problems

Pity Child of Such a Mother

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I could never talk to anyone about this problem and I must tell it to somebody. It is getting me down.

My husband and I have been married 10 years. Our son, who is now 8, is a very handsome boy. He has my husband's eyes and smile, my nose, a great shaped head and a strong jawline. Everyone remarks on his good looks.

Our daughter is two years old, and I am sorry to say she is the homeliest child I have ever seen. Nature really played a dirty trick on us. It would have been much better if the boy had been homely and the girl had been good looking. A girl needs beauty — a boy doesn't. Our daughter inherited the worst features of both my husband and me. When people see her they don't know what to say. Occasionally someone will ask, "Is that your child, or is she adopted?" I know what they are driving at.

When our daughter is older we can have her protruding ears fixed, her chin built up and her nose remolded. Hopefully she will have a good figure. If she doesn't, there are several things a girl can do. But the growing up years are going to be very hard on this pathetic child. Please tell me how to face the future cheerfully. If you could name some movie stars who were homely youngsters, it would help a lot. — Star Crossed.

Dear Crossed: The pathetic one in the family is you — not your daughter. How sad that you attach so much importance to good looks. I hope you get your thinking squared away before you transmit your anxieties to the little girl — if you haven't done so already. How dreadful for a child to feel that she has let her mother down because she isn't beautiful. Get some counseling, Mother. You've got a geranium in your cranium.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A woman in our club made an announcement at the last meeting that her daughter had telephoned her the night before from New Jersey to tell her the good news. She accepted a ring and is going to marry a doctor. Everyone said, "Congratulations," and "Isn't it wonderful," and how nice that Rosalie is getting such a catch. I myself was making plans to give a kitchen shower for Rosalie when I heard the real story. Her fiance is a dentist!

I telephoned my friend and asked her straight out why she said "doctor" when he is only a dentist. She got mad and yelled, "A dentist is a doctor." I told her she knew perfectly well what I meant. She hung up on me. Will you please tell me who is right? I know I am but I want to hear it from. — Trouble in Shaker Heights

Dear Shaker: A dentist is a doctor and Rosalie's mother has every right to call him a doctor if she wants to.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: When two older women live together, say two widowed sisters, or a mother and a daughter, or even two friends, and a card is sent for both — such as a Christmas card or an Easter greeting, or a letter — whose name should appear on the envelope first? We have had two long discussions about this at our weekly card club. Some members feel the older person's name should be first, others say the names should be alphabetized. What do you think? — One of Two

Dear One: I must confess I have never given this a thought. And now that I have thought about it, would you believe I don't think it makes a darned bit of difference? Go back and tell your club they need a project.

Give in or lose him ... when a guy gives you this line, look out! For tips on how to handle the supersex salesman, check Ann Landers.

Men Notice Gals Who Wear Glasses

Eyewear! The new name for glasses! Even the girls who don't need corrective eye care are wearing the fun, feminine and fabulous eyewear (with clear lenses) as fashion accessories

Not too many years ago, the girl who needed glasses felt left out — her choice was limited to the absolute necessary (for vision). How times have changed!

Today everybody wants to wear glasses — and that includes men, too. I've thought about that (what else to do on thousands of miles on airplanes?) and here is a first-hand, personal experience, Phyllis George analysis. People look at the face first. Right? When introduced to someone, where do you look? The eyes, of course. And when meeting an old friend, don't you look him in the eye and say "hi." The eyes are expressive and set each person apart from the next.

So it follows that the eyes shouldn't be hidden. New fashions call attention to the eyes in the most dramatic way. They're fun and they are now designed to match every fashionable look. You might say they frame the eyes — adding a bright happy look.

I made a stop in Chicago and had my eyes examined (that's important and I urge everyone to take good care of the only pair of eyes he'll ever have) and that's where I discovered the latest fashions in eyewear.

I talked with an expert, Mr. Jack Van Tuinen, president of Uhlemann Optical Co. He advises wearers of glasses to select eyewear to enhance their cosmetic needs in colors to compliment the wardrobe — and designs for moods and occasions.

I saw, too, that the new plastic lens gives protection for the eyes. Sometimes coating on glass protects, as well while making the eyes look brighter and clearer.

"Now we have 18 tints," Mr. Van Tuinen told me, "and the lens can be as light or dark as you'd like."

Can't you picture me, selecting the wildest, most fashionable eyewear with all colors of tints in the lenses? What fun! Now I have all designs — including Christian Dior. Talk about glamour! I have red and blue striped big round ones with the palest blue lens, large ones in crystals with crimson tints and tiniest square granny style. I even have "under the dryer" eyewear. They have short temples (I always called them ear pieces) and half-eye lenses for reading. And my prize is a pair of tiny glasses which slide together and fit into a midget case perfect for my evening purse.

Being an all-girl girl, I asked these knowing people about wearing eye make-up with glasses. I was told that regular eye make-up is fine but near-sighted people should wear a little extra since eyes look smaller behind their lens.

What I'm hoping is that I can show girls who wear glasses that they're lucky! We're fortunate that our eyes are being protected and that we can select a fun fashion accessory, "compliment getter" for our wardrobes.

If you're shopping for new eyewear, look for the latest in metal. There's round and oval and hexagon — small, medium and large — whatever goes with the real you. Then look to tints such as mulberry, jade, lemon, crimson, sand and many others. Select the tint which complements the colors in your wardrobe. My choices will last a long time and when I dress each morning, I choose from my wardrobe of eyewear as I do from my wardrobe of shoes and other accessories.

Looking for compliments? Men notice fashionable eyewear! Matter of fact, men's glasses are as exciting as women's and they're having as much fun as the gals.

Let's see. Which glasses shall I wear with my black pants suit? The round gold filigree with the sand-colored lens?

Designers Using Cotton Knits

Cotton knits take center stage on the spring fashion scene.

Fashion designers are using them in a variety of weights from jacquard patterns and medium gauge ribs to super fine gauge jerseys.

Typical of the new look for knits in sportswear is a lace-front pullover in ribbed cotton combined with knickers in a diamond jacquard motif.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

World Champions

by IRA G. CORN JR.
TEAM CAPTAIN

Today's hands were played in the world's first exhibition match for mass audiences.

Sponsored by the New Orleans Times Picayune and Crippled Children's Hospital earlier this year, the match pitted The Aces against a group of challengers from New Orleans. An average of 1,000 spectators per session watched the four sessions of play.

Question No. 1. You are South, East-West vulnerable, and hold:

♠ J 9 7 5 3 — ♥ 7 3 — ♦ A 8 3 2 — ♣ Q 7 — 4/15

Do you continue to game after this bidding?

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♥	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass

Question No. 2. You are South, no vulnerability, and you hold:

♠ A K 6 — ♥ 10 3 — ♦ 8 6 4 2 — ♣ A 8 6 4 — 4/15

Do you continue on to game after: (three hearts is non-forcing) 4/15

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♣	Pass	1 ♥
Pass	1 NT	Pass	3 ♥
Pass	?

Answer No. 1. If you pass, you lose six international match points (IMPs); if you continue to game, you break even. In the match, both pairs bid to game and there was no swing. The entire hand: 4/15

NORTH: ♠ A K 6 4 — ♥ A K J 6 2 — ♦ 10 5 — ♣ 10 3
WEST: ♠ Q 10 — ♥ Q 9 5 4 — ♦ Q 7 4 — ♣ A J 6 2
EAST: ♠ 8 2 — ♥ 10 8 — ♦ K J 9 6 — ♣ K 9 8 5 4
SOUTH: ♠ J 9 7 5 3 — ♥ 7 3 — ♦ A 8 3 2 — ♣ Q 7

Aces Billy Eisenberg and Bob Hamman played a two-diamond opening to show four spades and five hearts and 12-16 points (Flannery convention). Over two diamonds, Eisenberg leaped directly to the spade game.

In the other room, Julius Rosenblum, president of the World Bridge Federation, and Lou Gurvich had no trouble reaching game. North relieved South of any problems by leaping to four spades over the one-spade response.

Answer No. 2. If you continue on to game, as did Julius Rosenblum, you gain six IMPs. Game is on and was missed by The Aces in the other room.

The entire hand:

NORTH 4/15: ♠ 10 7 — ♥ A J 9 8 6 5 — ♦ A — ♣ Q 10 9 7
WEST: ♠ 9 4 3 2 — ♥ K 4 2 — ♦ K 10 5 3 — ♣ J 2
EAST: ♠ Q J 8 5 — ♥ Q 7 — ♦ Q J 8 7 — ♣ K 5 3
SOUTH: ♠ A K 6 — ♥ 10 3 — ♦ 8 6 4 2 — ♣ A 8 6 4

On the combined holding, four hearts is a good game and 11 tricks were made by both declarers.

Joan Kennedy Anti Presidency For Husband

LONDON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's wife said today she hopes he decides not to run for president in 1972 because she doesn't want to be first lady.

"Being the sister-in-law of a president," said 34-year-old Joan Kennedy, "I've been close at hand, and I know what it is really like. I do not want the job."

Kennedy has said he is not in the running for the White House in 1972, but his wife commented, "He is leaving it open. You can't blame him, can you?"

Kennedy, in New York City on a hospital inspection tour, said of his wife's statement: "I have nothing to add to what I said before."

"If my husband decides to run, then I will be with him all the way," she added. "But I would rather he did not run. We have three young children. If I were an older woman, the situation might be different."

Mrs. Kennedy passed through London en route to Bonn, where she will be the narrator in "Peter and the Wolf" with the touring Boston Symphony. She said the senator is meeting her there and they will return by way of London during the weekend.

Only Blind Faith Keeps Her Going

By TOM WELLS

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — "Shannon? Shannon! Come on, now, honey. It's time to get up."

Linda Stancil cooed softly to her 7-year-old daughter and there was the soft pat-pat-pat sound of a mother's hand on a little girl's pajamas.

It was 6:30 a.m., the start of another day for a husbandless, working mother, one of hundreds of thousands of such women in America.

Mrs. Stancil tries to make the best of things for her daughter and her 6-year-old son, Bryan. She looks a little older than her 28 years and her face sometime displays the effects of the daily pressure of working all day and being a mother and a father to the children at night.

She doesn't smile often and sometimes there are dark circles under her eyes.

Her weekdays start at 6 a.m. Sometimes, she says, she lies still after silencing the harsh buzzer of the alarm clock and longs to remain in the security of sleep where things are quiet and problems are forgotten.

But she gets up, gets herself ready for work and then rides herd on her two children to make certain that they get ready for school on time.

By the time she went to awaken the children on a typical morning, Bryan already was out of bed, standing sleepy-eyed in the doorway of his bedroom with his blond hair awry.

Mrs .Stancil walked into her daughter's bedroom, softly, as mothers do unconsciously, and flicked on the light.

Things move quickly around the Stancil house on weekday mornings.

The radio in Mrs. Stancil's bedroom could be heard clearly through the house. A disc jockey was warming up with practiced cheeriness. The Tijuana Brass came on strong.

"Bryan? How are you doing in there?" asked Mrs. Stancil as she passed by her son's room on the way to the kitchen. "Get dressed, now. Put your pajamas in your drawer and make your bed."

Just Yesterday

Was it yesterday that Mrs. Stancil was a child herself? Running, laughing, playing on her parents' farm in North Carolina.

"Momma, where's my belt?" Bryan asked from his bedroom. His voice had the same irritation as that of a grownup who has misplaced an item.

"I think it's hanging on the bathroom door," his mother replied from the kitchen as she poured hot water from a pan into a glass coffee pot.

"No, it isn't. That's my skinny one. I mean my black one."

Some of the hot water splashed onto one of Mrs. Stancil's hands and she grimaced.

"Mom-ma." Shannon sang out from her bedroom in a barely audible voice. Then came some mumbles.

"What, Shannon? What did you say?" Mrs. Stancil rubbed ointment onto the injured hand.

"I said why didn't you hem this dress up so I can wear it?" Shannon asked.

"I told you before that's a summer dress," her mother said .

It wasn't too many years ago that this 28-year-old mother was waiting in wild anticipation at her parents' home for her very first school day. Life was like a spring day then.

"Bryan, did you get that bed made yet? If you have, come on in here and get your breakfast." On her way to check on Bryan's progress, she glanced into her daughter's room and found her sitting listlessly on the edge of the bed, still undressed.

What's going on here, Shannon?" Patting time was over. "Sit up here and get dressed. You're asking for it, young lady, and I mean it."

A momentary lull in the banter. The radio's song drifted into the bedroom. "I'll taste the wine in Kingston harbor, I'll sing a song in old San Juan, I'll...."

Life is no picnic for Mrs. Stancil now. Dreams, perhaps of gaily papered walls in a new house and of love and warmth, had faded since her marriage at 17.

Christmas Present

Her take-home pay of $70 a week and $120 a month for child support comes to about $400 income each month. Her Christmas present from her father was four new tires, and she was ecstatic. It was just what she needed.

"Momma! Shannon won't let me in the bathroom!"

"Well, you'll just have to wait until she's through."

"But she's not doing anything!"

"Yes I am!" came Shannon's angry retort from behind the closed bathroom door.

"Nyah, nyah-nyah, nyah-nyah," came a taunt from Shannon, now in the kitchen with her brother. Wham-bam giggle-scuffle ha-ha-ha, came the sounds of a good natured battle.

Earlier, Mrs. Stancil had been asked about her budget.

"What budget?" she asked. It all goes for bills, so there's no need to make out a budget. When bread and milk runs out a week before payday, she just has to "wait until the paycheck comes in to buy some more."

By 7:45 a.m., Mrs. Stancil managed to get the children into the car. She dropped them off at school, just a block away. It would be an hour before school started. Sometimes she lets them stay at home until classes begin.

Bills?

The monthly ones are $103 for rent, $33 for furniture, $15 for telephone, about $11 for electricity, about $25 for natural gas and about $20 for gasoline.

"Oh, yeah," she said. "And $2.10 for water."

Twelve dollars a week goes to a child-care center that keeps the children after they get out of school, and there are unfigured bills for groceries, doctor bills, medicine, clothes, car repairs, etc.

Mrs. Stancil goes home for lunch. Her children eat at the school's cafeteria. At 5 p.m. she drives several blocks from work to the child-care center, where she picks up the children after they get out of school.

Once at home she must dive into preparing the evening meal, cleaning house, washing, ironing and other chores.

She has little social life.

"Friends seemed to evaporate" when she and her husband separated four years ago. "They all just went kapoof," she said.

"And you're no longer the single person you used to be, so you don't fit there. You're no longer the married person, so you don't fit there. You're just in a separate world."

The children were in and out of the house, the door banging shut each time. Minutes later they were feuding. Mrs. Stancil sent them both crying to their rooms.

She composed herself and smiled slightly.

Mrs. Stancil does date some. But her other-world position of being separated from her husband causes problems.

"I don't have very many friends who are men because you don't know what their interest is," she said. "Nine times out of 10 it isn't good. You know what they think about a woman who's separated."

It doesn't look as though life is going to get any easier for Mrs. Stancil. But, she said, "It was blind faith when I got married, and it's blind faith now that keeps me going. Blind faith that things will get better.

"They've got to."

In the morning comes the familiar routine.

"Shannon? Shannon, honey, it's time to get up...."

Working As a Secretary brings Mrs. Stancil take-home pay of about $70 per week. She gets $120 a month for child support from her estranged husband. Help from her family, she says, may be the margin between going broke and barely making it.

Struggling With a Load of laundry is only part of a long working day for Mrs. Linda Stancil, Charlotte, N. C. Her daily routine begins with getting up at six in the morning, going out to her secretarial job, and continuing at night with chores, housecleaning and caring for her two children. The struggle through four years of separation from her husband has been an unremitting one. (AP Newsfeature Photos)

Pitched at Clinton

3 Brewer Hurlers Led by Jim Slaton Blank White Sox

By JERRY LISKA
Associated Press Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Jim Slaton, an untested rookie the Milwaukee Brewers were pitching "strictly from hunger" may turn out to be one of the American League's surprises of the season.

The 20-year-old Slaton, who had two years of limited pro experience since he left Antelope Valley (Calif.) Junior College, overpowered the Chicago White Sox for six innings yesterday to trigger the Brewers to a 2-0 victory.

"I had a lot of butterflies in my stomach in my first major league start, but after the first few innings I knew I was all right," said Slaton. "I just kept trying to throw strikes and I got more confidence each inning."

Slaton, a handsome, 6-foot, 182-pounder, isn't listed in the Brewer brochure and even Frank Lane, the club's director of baseball operations, was fuzzy on the kid's background.

"All I know is that Slaton pitched about 25 innings with Clinton of the Midwest League the past two years," said Lane before the rookie left on a three-single yield for a pinch-hitter in the seventh when the Brewers scored a decisive first run off Chicago's Tommy John.

That run broke a 24-inning scoreless skein for the Brewers whom Lane said started Slaton out of desperation. "The kid proved in spring training he was not awed by major league hitters," said Lane. "He has a fast ball, a promising curve and a great desire to pitch."

In the Brewer dressing room, the quiet-spoken Slaton enlightened sports writers on his brief pro career.

He was signed by defunct Seattle out of Antelope Valley Junior College, about 60 miles north of Los Angeles, for $15,000 in 1969. That included $5,000 for actually signing, $3,000 to continue his schooling, and $7,500 based on progress. "I'd just as soon not talk about that," Slaton said.

Slaton spent ten days with Billings, Mont., in the Rookie League, and then, in less than half a season, had a 6-3 record with Clinton. In 1970, National Guard duty limited him to 18 innings and a 1-1 record at Clinton. "We were impressed with Slaton in the Arizona Instructional League and this spring when he reported after pitching in the Puerto Rico winter league," said Brewer manager Dave Bristol.

Bristol pulled Slaton in the seventh for pinch-hitter Dan Walton after another Brewer rookie, shortstop Rick Auerbach, slammed his first major league hit, a single. It turned out a master move when Walton walked and Tommy Harper slammed a single scoring Auerbach for a 1-0 Brewer lead.

"Slaton wasn't tired, it was just a spot where a pinch-hitter could help us win a tight game," said Bristol. The Brewers, who now have won two of five shutout games in the young season, scored again in the ninth on two walks and Ted Savage's pop single.

It was the fifth straight loss for the White Sox, and Chicago ace, John, took the defeat for a 1-1 record.

Chamberlain Bulwark for Los Angeles

By JACK STEVENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Those who gave the Los Angeles Lakers up for dead must take another look today.

The makeshift array outfought the Milwaukee Bucks 118 to 107 Wednesday night, helped by the home-court advantage and a balanced attack bulwarked by Wilt Chamberlain.

So going into Friday's fourth game of the best-of-seven sreies for the National Basketball Association's Western crown, Milwaukee's lead has been cut to 2-1. Game No. 4 will be at the Forum where 17,334 saw Los Angeles score its victory.

Wilt Unstoppable

Big Wilt was one of four Lakers to score 24 points and he also pulled down 24 rebounds. Even the Bucks' Oscar Robertson commented. "Chamberlain made a big difference."

In the opening two games at Milwaukee, the Bucks had dominated 106-85 and 91-73. The Lakers, already without Jerry West, also lost starter Keith Erickson who underwent an appendectomy Sunday.

So there were two in their line-up, Jim McMillian and Pat Riley, who hadn't played much during the regular season.

But Riley, who took over for Erickson, scored 24 points and did a solid job guarding Robertson who took but 10 shots and scored 11 points.

Two Dozen

Other Lakers with two dozen tallies were Happy Hairston and Gail Goodrich while McMillian hit for 18.

Bob Dandridge led Milwaukee's scoring with 25. Lew Alcindor, the 7-2 Most Valuable Player in the NBA, had 20 with 19 rebounds.

"We didn't play well at all," Lew commented. "But we will be ready on Friday night."

Coach Larry Costello echoed the sentiments generally and also declared, "Oscar has got to shoot the ball more. He's too good a shooter to take only 10 shots."

The Lakers led each period, 28-27 at the quarter and then 56-55 at halftime. Then, with Riley scoring 11, they erupted for 34 in the third stanza and a 90-77 lead.

Coach Joe Mullaney, who held Laker practices both Monday and Tuesday, declared, "a lot of hard work paid off."

Tripleheader Is Set Back 1 Week

NEW YORK (AP) — A closed circuit television boxing tripleheader in Chicago, Toronto and Oakland, has been moved back a week, from May 3 to May 10.

K.O. Inc., which set up the all-heavyweight show, said Wednesday it changed the date to accommodate Chicago promoter Joe Kellman.

Kellman's feature bout matches Ernie Terrell, the former World Boxing Association heavyweight champion, and Brazil's Luis Faustino Pires at the Amphitheatre.

Reed Injured Again

Bullets Humiliate Knicks, 101-80

All of a sudden the Baltimore Bullets and Los Angeles Lakers are very much alive in the National Basketball Association playoffs.

The Bullets walloped the champion New York Knicks 101-80 Wednesday night to tie the Eastern Conference final at 2-2. The Lakers similarly whacked the Milwaukee Bucks 118-107 to cut the Bucks' lead in the Western Conference final to 2-1.

In the American Basketball Association playoffs the Indiana Pacers drubbed the Utah Stars 120-107 to even their West Division final at 1-1.

Humiliate Champs

The Bullets, who had walloped the Knicks 114-88 Sunday, humiliated the NBA champs for the second straight time at Baltimore. Led by Jack Marin's 27 points they took command in the first quarter and were never headed. They turned the game into a rout in the final period.

The fifth game will be played in New York Friday and the Knicks have cause for worry. Willis Reed, their star, reinjured his right shoulder, scored only 14 points, and sat out the last seven minutes.

Billy Keller, Indiana's 5-foot-11 backcourter, tossed in six three-point goals as part of his over-all 31 points to lead the Pacers over Utah at Indianapolis. Roger Brown added 30.

"This was a game we really needed," said Indiana Coach Bob Leonard. "Now we can go to Utah in pretty good shape."

Merve Jackson was high scorer for the Stars with 2 points. The third game of the series will be played in Salt Lake City Saturday.

Kentucky and Virginia open the ABA East Division final tonight at Richmond, Va.

Oshkosh Rally Deals Terrors 6-2 Setback

OSHKOSH — Appleton West's baseball team held a 2-0 lead after four innings, but Oshkosh tallied four times in the fifth and twice in the sixth for a 6-2 Fox Valley Association victory here Wednesday.

The game was the opener for both teams in conference play. West had won its initial non-conference game against Waupaca last week.

Both teams got only three hits in the contest. Dwight Mueller, Terry Kiley and George Downey handled the mound duties for the Terrors, while Tim Fenn went all the way for the Indians.

West's two runs came in the second inning as Brian Kasten scored on a passed ball and Ted Vonck came home on a wild pitch.

Four walks aided the Oshkosh flurry in the fourth. Jim Pelky singled in two markers, a bases-loaded walk by Dwight Mueller accounted for a third, and a fielder's choice gave the Indians their fourth.

Bryan Miller drove in one run in the sixth and a passed ball counted the other to complete the Oshkosh scoring.

Kasten had a double, while Vonck and Pete Loughrin rapped singles for the West hits.

Has Been With Brewers Longest

Hegan Eyes Improvement

BY ROGER PITT
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

MILWAUKEE — Quick, who's been with the Milwaukee Brewers (Seattle Pilots) the longest?

If you answered Mike Hegan, you're right. Hegan, son of former Cleveland Indian catcher Jim Hegan, joined the Pilots June 14, 1968, in an outright purchase transaction involving the New York Yankees.

Four months later the expansion draft was held and only four of the 30 players selected that day still remain with the team.

Hegan, only 28, has the reputation of being an outstanding glove man at first. He's clubbing the ball at a .333 clip this year, but since opening day has been filling in for late inning defensive purposes.

Hit Crisp .292

Mike is hoping for a combination year in 1971 — a combination of 1969 and 1970. In 1969, Hegan batted a crisp .292 for Seattle and last season totaled 11 home runs and 52 runs batted in. Both are his best major league totals.

Hegan enjoys batting behind leadoff man Tommy Harper. "I feel more comfortable batting second . . . it's more adaptable to my type of hitting," he said.

"I like to hit the opposite way (left field) and if I can move Tommy up I've done my job."

His personal goal for the 1971 campaign is to raise his average 40, or 50 points.

"On a whole I suppose last season was the best overall year I've ever had," Hegan said. "I'd like to keep the totals, but bat .280 or .290."

Southpaw Hurlers

Milwaukee has been faced by a string of southpaw hurlers and this is one reason Hegan has been relegated to relief status.

The Brewers have been in a batting slump over three games and have been getting strong pitching. Hegan may vault back into starter status at any moment.

"It was an on and off spring," Hegan confided. "I started slow but was hitting the ball well late and getting my hits every day. I feel confident going into this season."

Mike says the Brewers chances depend on how much the other teams have strengthened themselves.

"You can't get a real picture in spring training. The Athletics and Twins have been having trouble with their pitching staffs. If the Angels get good pitching with the ball club they have, they will be the team to beat."

Better Balance

"I can't see ourselves out of contention at all," Hegan said. "We're a better balanced ball club. If our pitching starts off the way it finished last year we'll be in the race."

Mike spoke in admiring words of one of his challengers for the first base job. "I call him sir," Hegan said in response to a question about rookie Pete Koegel.

"He's about 6-6 and weighs 230 pounds and can hit the ball out of sight," Hegan said. "I hope he gets a chance to play, but hopefully not at my position."

Milwaukee is a much improved team over last season, Hegan feels.

Mike said, "We've improved our depth and we've approximately got the same starting line up."

Kosco Big Help

"Andy Kosco can do a lot of things and will be a big help. Bill Voss is an outstanding hitter and a good defensive outfielder. Ellie Rodriguez will help our catching, he's as good as Jerry McNertney," Hegan said.

"Marcelino Lopez is certainly going to help," Mike added. "We had a bad need for a left handed starter or reliefer . . . he can do both."

Hegan said, "We've got a good pitching staff. If they can stay healthy we'll be a good team."

Quality pitching is a commodity Hegan should recognize. As a youngster he watched his dad catch the greatest staff in baseball — Bob Feller, Bob Lemon, Early Wynn, Mike Garcia and Herb Score.

During the off-season Hegan works for WTMJ-TV in Milwaukee as a sports commentator.

He hopes to hit a few out of sight before making that job his main employment.

Fleisher's 4-Under-Par 2nd in Spanish Open

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — Bruce Fleisher of Miami, Fla., shot a four-under-par 68 in the first round of the Spanish Open Golf Tournament Wednesday to be one stroke off the lead.

There was a four-way tie at 67 for the top between Peter Townsend of Ireland; Clive Clack of Britain, Dale Hayes of South Africa and Roberto de Vicenzo of Argentina.

The 72-hole tourney ends Saturday with the winner getting $7,142.

Expect Big Turnout of Anglers

Walleyes to Spawn This Weekend?

BY JIM HARP
Post-Crescent Outdoor Editor

There's a possibility this could be "the" weekend along the Wolf River.

From Shiocton on down to Winneconne, small communities and their businessmen have stocked their larders in anticipation of a big "run" Saturday and Sunday.

The businessmen are interested in the "run" by the fishermen and the anglers have their sights set on the spring "run" by the popular walleyed pike.

Indications Tuesday were that everything is readiness for the spawning rite of the walley which is imminent. When the water temperatures reach about 46 degrees the magic moment for the walley arrives and the fish head for the spawning areas along the river. Along the Wolf these mainly consist of the flooded marshes from New London on north, some as far upriver as Leeman.

"With a little warm weather this week," a Shiocton service station operator said "we should see a lot of fishermen out and a lot more fish should be taken. The reason you're not hearing about any big catches is that there haven't been too many fellows out yet. I don't know what they're waiting for."

One thing is certain, there is no lack of water for either fish or fishermen along the Wolf River. Many fields are still flooded and the river level was boosted again by the rainfall Monday which was quite heavy in some areas.

In addition, there is still a lot of snow in the woods in the far north, according to latest reports. This snow is gradually melting and the runoff has been deliberate, but slow because of the cold night temperatures. The Wolf is a direct recipient of the water flow from the north and hence, the water temperatures have remained on the very cold side.

At the public boat landing in Shiocton near the American Legion Clubhouse, just off Highway 54 at the bridge, a lone angler was pushing his boat out.

"I'm going to try it," he offered. "I've been down at "bamboo bend" for five nights and have yet to lose a minow. The fish just haven't been hitting at all."

In New London and Fremont, more fishermen were out, but the results were poor Tuesday.

Action Slowed

A Fremont bait dealer said that some pike were taken last weekend and it appeared things were picking up. Then came the rain Monday and the cooler temperatures and action slowed immediately.

Not only the river, but all of Partridge Lake at Fremont is cleared of ice. When spawning has been completed, the lake offers some excellent fishing for northern pike as well as panfish.

Along the shore, there is open water at Lake Poygan, but there is a large ice flow shifting around the central part of the lake. The ice moves with the wind so the amount of open water varies from day to day.

Action on the Fox River at Eureka also was slow Tuesday. An Appleton angler, who spent seven hours fishing near the Eureka dam, reported seeing only one fish taken between 5 a.m. and noon.

The expectation about a fishing upswing for the weekend may be a bit premature in light of the fact that temperatures have remained on the cool side. It is more likely that the best angling will probably come near the mid-point of next week or by the weekend. However, you can bet there will be a large number of fishermen out Saturday and Sunday.

Plumbers' Friend on SBA Council

By PEGGY SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mary Lou Grier beats everybody to the joke about being the plumber's best friend.

She admits to being a dripping - faucet expert — and president - manager of a plumbing supply firm in Boerne, Tex.

Today she takes on a new job: chairman of the 85-member National Advisory Council of the Small Business Administration.

Mrs. Grier is long on expertise in politics—she's one of five vice presidents of the Texas Republican Party—but she's been in business for herself only about 18 months.

Her husband, Baxter, would have to be called a big businessman. He's executive vice president of one of San Antonio's major industries, the Alamo Iron Works.

"I always believed in the free-enterprise system and I just felt this was an opportunity to do something challenging," Mrs. Grier said in an interview Tuesday. "I'm the plumber's friend."

Last April she was named to the SBA's advisory council as an at-large member for the states of Texas, New Mexico, Arkansas, Louisiana and Oklahoma.

The average person thinks of the SBA as strictly a lending agency, Mrs. Grier said, and doesn't know that a big hunk of the time is spent in giving free advice.

"The typical small-town businessman just doesn't know the elements of doing business, even of keeping books," she said, "and suddenly they find they're in difficulty and they don't know why."

The 46-year-old Mrs. Grier calls small business the backbone of the nation and says there's still room for repeats of the Horatio Alger, self-made tycoon story.

Asked about extra attention to efforts of minorities to break into the white-dominated business world, Mrs. Grier said:

"I think they really ought to be judged on merit, rather than saying, 'Wowee, we need this many people involved, whether the minority be women or what.'

"I haven't seen any statistics to see where we've come from to today, to know whether we've been able to accomplish enough or whether more needs to be done to bring everybody into the mainstream."

Italians Show Hemlines Just Below the Knee

By ODETTE MENGIN
Associated Press Writer

FLORENCE, Italy (AP) — Despite a handful of hot pants and a few male-like tuxedoes, most of the fall-winter fashions at the Italian ready-to-wear showings this week settled on a sensible look with hemlines just below the knees.

A number of buyers thought the look would appeal to American women. Said George H. Bewcomb of Colorado Springs: "We like femininity, not the unisex look. Women want to be women again."

In the minority were the occasional miniskirt with see-through blouse or plunging neckline, a few pairs of hot pants, somber city suits and the tuxedoes for evening that Marlene Dietrich once affected.

The designers gave a solid majority vote for coats, suits and dresses in winter tweeds or soft woolens with hemlines just covering the knee.

Waists were accentuated by broad belts. Shoulders were fairly square or with raglan sleeves, as shown by Giovanna Ferridamo, Picri or Caumont.

A variety of slacks and trousers turned up in most collections. Caumont offered jodhpurs. Trell preferred chlottes or plain tights.

The oriental influence was strong. Ken Scott took a trip to Japan and turned his models into demure geishas walking painfully on impractical wooden blocks. Prints were gay with a predominance of blue.

La Mendola showed full skirts of flowing georgette in prints of mixed green, blue and fuschia called "Behind the Bamboo Curtain." Her platform shoes also had an Eastern look, and so did some trousers under a kind of sarong.

Livio de Simone from Naples showed tiered capes in four colors, a few simple suits and pleated dresses and a bunch of jump suits in speckled blue and mauve with quantities of zip fasteners.

Apart from basic black, gray and brown, red in all shades was a popular color. Some designers chose to add more brightness with multi-colored prints. Argos Dini had flowers and peacock tails on a short of bath wrap evening dress that came down straight from the arms and encircled the ankles. New shades were salmon pink, bronze green, orange and lilac.

Hair Change Teen's 'Thing'

It used to be easier to change horses in mid-stream than to change hair styles in mid-week!

The "over 30" crowd might stick to the weekend hair care routine, but surely not America's teens. And the "older generation" members might find hair styles that suit them and keep them. Not America's teens.

Teens try the latest, the newest and the styles that are wild and wayout. They can set and comb in mere minutes. The now secret of changing hair styles in mid-week is steam or electric rollers, the miracle of the century which lets a teen set her hair — in a brand new style or the same flattering one she's been wearing — every night before going out.

Hard Luck Knowles Gets Nats Victory

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

The telephone rang in the Washington bullpen and Darold Knowles got up to start throwing. The scoreboard showed the Senators trailing 5-0—a fairly safe situation for Knowles, who is one of baseball's premier relief pitchers, but not one of its luckiest.

Knowles logged 27 saves and a 2.04 earned run average last season. The numbers are more than respectable until you get to his record, which was a woeful 2-14.

Ted Williams, manager of the Senators, called it the phoniest record in baseball history. Knowles called it a few other things.

The problem was Knowles' knack for not getting any runs from the Senators to support his pitching. He'd enter tied games, hold the opposition scoreless for a couple of innings and then get nicked for a run and the loss. Washington rarely scored for him.

But this is a brand new season and Knowles is the proud owner of a glittering 2-0 record.

He recorded his second victory in a week Wednesday night when the Senators, ignoring the fact that he was the pitcher of record, exploded for six runs in the bottom of the seventh inning and a 6-5 victory over Boston.

In other American League action Wednesday, Baltimore blanked Cleveland 3-0, New York rapped Detroit 8-4, Milwaukee shut out Chicago 2-0, Oakland took Minnesota 6-1 and California dropped Kansas City 4-1.

Knowles hasn't given up a run in 5 1-3 innings spread over three games. But when he mowed down the Red Sox in the top of the seventh Wednesday night, it hardly seemed important since Washington trailed by five runs.

Became Important

Suddenly, though, it became very important as Washington rallied. Mike Epstein opened with a walk and singles by Joe Foy, Frank Howard and Richie Scheinblum kayoed Mike Nagy, who had been working on a two-hit shutout until then.

An error by reliever Bob Bolin loaded the bases and then Bolin walked Tom McCraw and Elliot Maddox on eight pitches, forcing two more runs home. Tim Cullen followed with a single driving home Washington's tying and winning runs and making a winner of the perennial loser, Knowles.

Mike Cuellar spun a four hitter and Boog Powell bombed a two-run homer to move Baltimore past Cleveland. The Orioles have won five of six games and have had four complete game efforts by their pitching staff.

McDowell Jolted

Powell's two-run shot jolted loser Sam McDowell in the third inning and Paul Blair doubled home the Birds' other run in the sixth.

Felipe Alou, making his debut for the Yankees, tagged a fourth inning homer that touched off a four-run New York rally in the victory over Detroit. Winning pitcher Fritz Peterson singled in one run in that rally and drove in another when he drew a bases-loaded walk later in the game.

Dick McAuliffe homered for the Tigers.

Reggie Jackson ripped two homers and pitcher Diego Segui tagged a three-run shot as Oakland downed Minnesota Jackson, who lugged a .156 batting average into the game, ignited a five run rally in the sixth with a 422-foot blast. Segui added his homer later in the inning and then Jackson connected again with a 437-foot homer in the next inning.

Pinch hitter Tony Gonzalez cleared the bases with a three-run double as California scored all of its runs in seventh inning to defeat Kanas City.

The Angels had tied the game at 1-1 on singles by Jim Fregosi and Jim Spencer and a double by Jerry Moses. Sandy Alomar was walked intentionally and then Gonzalez, batting for Ken Berry, delivered his winning hit.

Kentucky Opposes Off-Track Betting for New York City

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The Kentucky Division of the Horsemen's Benevolent and Protective Association has voiced its opposition to New York City's planned off-track betting on this year's Kentucky Derby.

In a press release Wednesday, the group said it "opposes any off-track betting which does not recognize and compensate the horsemen, the race tracks and the state in which such events are run."

The division said it is joining with Churchill Downs' officials and the state of Kentucky in the "possibility of legal action to protect their interest."

The division represents all horse owners and trainers who race at Kentucky race tracks, according to Edward Bonnie, the organization's secretary-treasurer and legal counsel.

New York City's new Off-Track Betting Corp. has announced plans to conduct an off-track pool on the 97th Derby May 1, but the plan has resulted in strong criticism from Churchill Downs President Lynn Stone and the Kentucky Legislative Research Commission.

The research commission has asked state Atty. Gen. John Breckinridge to begin legal action to stop the New York pool.

Bonnie said the horsemen's association will make a decision next week whether it will take legal action independently or in conjunction with the state and Churchill Downs.

Royals Academy Plans Goodwill American Tour

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Members of the Kansas City Royals Baseball Academy will begin a two-week goodwill tour of four Central American countries May 7.

Spokesmen said the 26 student-athletes would visit Nicaragua, Guatemala, Costa Rica and either Panama or Colombia in northwest South America. At each stop they will play games, conduct clinics and show baseball films.

The academy of the American League Royals, a pet project of owner Ewing M. Kauffman, is the only one of its kind. It combines a college education at Manatee Junior College with a baseball training camp.

Upon their return from Central America they will begin play as the Sarasota Royals in the Gulf Coast League, a rookie circuit.

NHL President Tested

Rangers, Maple Leafs Balk at Maximum Fines for Playoff Brawl

MONTREAL (AP) — Clarence Campbell's latest assessment of fines for brawling in National Hockey League games has sparked a storm at management level.

The NHL president imposed a record $16,550 in fines Tuesday on the Toronto Maple Leafs and the New York Rangers, including a maximum $5,000 apiece to each club, for their part in a donnybrook involving all players from both teams during a playoff game last Thursday in New York.

Campbell said Wednesday that Leaf president Stafford Smythe, currently basking in Florida sunshine, has advised the NHL his club won't pay the fine.

Smythe could not be reached for further comment and his vice president, Harold Ballard, refused to be drawn into the discussion when interviewed in Toronto.

Earlier, Ballard suggested the league rules to dissuade players leaving the bench to participate in brawls would find much more support if the player leading the exodus was "suspended a couple of games without pay and that would stop it."

Bill Jennings, The Ranger president, said his club will appeal the size of the club fine.

Jennings said he couldn't understand why Campbell would hit New York with such a heavy fine while the NHL president apparently condoned Boston defenseman Bobby Orr shoving linesman Ron Ego in another playoff game the same night.

Campbell said the Bruins already are on record as appealing a $1,000 club fine levied against them for a bench-clearing incident during a game with Buffalo at Boston earlier in the season.

In announcing from his office Wednesday Smythe's refusal to pay the fine, Campbell may have issued what could be construed as a "support-me-or-else" ultimatum.

"It has reached the stage," he said, "where we will have to determine once and for all whether the governors of the NHL want this type of conduct suppressed and eliminated or do they only want it eliminated for other clubs when their team is not involved."

Quit Kidding

The NHL president said he's tired of reading published reports of "quit kidding, Mr. Campbell." in reference to the fines he imposes.

Saying that brawling on the scale of the New York incident detracts from hockey in the eyes of the fans, Campbell added:

"We can't go on like this. They (the governors) declared they wanted this type of behavior eliminated from the game. I asked for the powers to impose the fines and they gave them to me. However, this policy cannot be effective unless it has the complete and wholehearted support of top-level management of every club.

"Unhappily, the recurrence of these incidents indicates all too clearly that support has not been forthcoming, and, in this particular instance, it created one of the most derogatory spectacles the league has produced in several years."

Additinonal $50

In Toronto, Emile Francis, the Rangers' general-manager and coach, was particularly incensed by the additional $50 fine to New York.

"We got this because the team left the bench. Why doesn't he (Campbell) check and see which team left the bench first? Why doesn't he check and see that Toronto has left the bench four times this year and we've left it only twice?

"Why should we get the greater penalty?

"Also, what is the matter with his timing? Here we are in the word of the fines, by messenger, a few minutes before the game (in New York). Why not wait until we have a day off? I guess it's a good thing we won last (Tuesday) night. I would have really blown my stack."

He said the only way the league is going to stop incidents of this nature "is to suspend the first guy off, and the second and the third. That would stop it, snap, like that."

Campbell blamed much of the brawling in recent years to the employment by clubs of "a muscle man, a so-called policeman."

"This fellow, prior to the introduction of the new legislation, was always the first man off the bench.

"Because these tactics generated some measure of success they were imitated by other clubs."

Fondy Depth Cools Rockets

Long Jump, 440 Won by Schaller; Koeck Stands Out

FOND DU LAC — Fond du Lac High School's Fox River Valley Conference indoor track champions edged Neenah, 65-62, in the outdoor debut for both teams here Wednesday.

The Rockets outdid the Cardinals, 8-7, in first places but the latter picked up eight of 13 seconds. Neenah slammed the high hurdles and Fondy took all three places in the discus.

Double winners included Neenah's Greg Schaller, long jump, at 19-3 and 440 in 52.6 seconds, and Steve Suechting, high and low hurdles in :16.4 and :22.7, respectively, and Fondy's Rick Koeck, shot put, 56-7¾ in. and discus, 158-7½, and Craig Hinke, 100 and 220 yard dashes, in 10.6 and 24.4 seconds.

Other Neenah winners were Don Gullickson, 880, 2:04.1; Rick Peotter, pole vault, 12-3, and the mile and 880 yard relay units.

Fondy's other victors were Jim Pinnow, mile, 4:40.4; Jim Kannenberg, 2-mile, 10:13.8 and Jeff Scharf, high jump, 5-10.

Each Hold 3-2 Lead

North Stars, Rangers, Bruins Can Wrap up NHL Playoffs Tonight

By BRUCE LOWITT
Associated Press Sports Writer

Minnesota, New York and Boston can wrap up their National Hockey League Stanley Cup quarter-final playoffs tonight. But while the North Stars are solely concerned about hockey, the Rangers and Bruins also have money on their minds.

Minnesota, hosting the St. Louis Blues, the Rangers, visiting Toronto, and the Bruins, taking on the Canadiens in Montreal, each hold 3-2 leads in their best-of-seven rounds. The Chicago Black Hawks swept Philadelphia in four games to win their series.

NHL President Clarence Campbell revealed Wednesday that the Maple Leafs and Rangers have balked at paying the stiff fines he levied against them for engaging in a riotous, bench-emptying brawl a week ago in their second game.

It came to $16,550—$5,000 against each club and the rest spread among the major participants in the battle.

Teams Confident

Meanwhile, looking ahead to tonight's action, the teams with the lead were, as usual, cautiously optimistic and those with catching up to do were, also as usual, confident.

"Our guys were uptight for the first couple of games of the series," said New York's Ted Irvine, who scored just 34 seconds into Tuesday night's game to send the Rangers off and running to a 3-1 victory. "But we're more relaxed now."

And goalie Eddie Giacomin, who lost his shutout in the closing minutes with the Rangers two men short, said: "What's important is that we won. I'll get the shutout Thursday."

But Toronto Coach John McLellan felt differently. "I have a great deal of faith in this team. I won't quit. You'll find that out — and so will the Rangers."

Said Boston Coach Tom Johnson: "It's still not over. You need four to win. We've only got three."

Said Montreal's Al McNeil, whose Canadiens fell behind with a 7-3 loss to the Bruins: "It was a bad game—but we've had bad games before and come out."

Said Minnesota's Jack Gordon: "It's not over yet. These two teams are too evenly matched to think that."

Said St. Louis' Scotty Bowman, whose Blues dropped their crucial fifth game 4-3: "We made a mistake and they capitalized on it. We haven't been getting many gifts from them."

'Pizza Drive' to Benefit Several Xavier Projects

The "pizza drive" currently under way at Xavier High School, will help finance two athletic projects, among others.

Among contemplated purchases from the fund are an athletic department whirlpool and uniforms for the girls basketball team.

Students will solicit orders through April 23. Xavier students and Booster Club members hope to make and deliver 15,000 pizzas May 1. A Milwaukee food services firm will supply ingredients and advice.

The pizza fund will also be used for such improvements as blocktopping of the parking lot and the purchase of a storage shed.

Redlegs Complete Sweep of Series By Beating Braves

By KEN RAPPOPORT

Johnny Bench took some extra batting practice in Atlanta Stadium.

Wasn't it nice of the Braves to supply the pitchers:

Cincinnati's most valuable catcher topped off a series of fence wrecking, ripening his batting average with two singles and a home run Wednesday night as the Reds pasted the Braves 8-3.

The Bench barrage, which helped the defending National League champions sweep the three-game set, included a total four homers of his seven hits, seven runs knocked in and six scored.

His singles Wednesday night were against long-time knuckleball nemesis Phil Niekro and boosted Bench's morale as well as his hitting percentage.

"Already I've had a good year against Niekro," said Bench, whose mark jumped from .250 to .379 with this sensational series." "He's the toughest pitcher for me to hit."

Atlanta's Hank Aaron also did a job on the Cincinnati staff, including two homers Wednesday night that gave him three for the series. Hammerin' Hank, who started the series with an un-Aaron-like .100 average, skied to .242 with a 6-for-13 performance, 6 RBI and 3 runs scored.

Philadelphia trimmed Pittsburgh 6-5. San Francisco turned back Houston 2-1 and St. Louis beat Los Angeles 7-1 in the other National League games. Two contests were rained out — Chicago at San Diego and New York at Montreal.

Tony Cloninger got his first victory of the year for Cincinnati, but had to be bailed out in the last three innings by Clay Carroll, a former Brave.

The Reds snapped a 2-2 tie with four runs in the third inning, opening with singles by Tony Perez and Bench. Willie Smith bounced to Niekro, who fielded the ball and threw it into center field, allowing Perez to score.

Hal McRay then drilled a two-run double to the fence and Tommy Helms got in the last run of the inning with a grounder that scored McRae.

Aaron, now only three homers away from the 600-career plateau, unloaded a two-run shot in the first inning then fired a solo blast into the left field seats in the fourth. It was the 38th time Aaron had smashed two four-baggers in a game.

Denny Doyle delivered a two-run single with the bases soaked in the last of the eighth as Philadelphia struck from behind. The Pirates had gone ahead 5-4 in the top of the frame when Al Oliver's force-out bouncer scored Manny Sanguillen.

The Pirates threatened in the ninth, but Dick Selma rescued Philadelphia by nipping the rally with men on first and second and one out.

Tito Fuentes' two-out single to center in the 11th inning drove in Frank Johnson with the winning run for San Francisco, which won its third straight game.

Dick Dietz opened the frame against reliever George Culver with a single. After a strikeout, Johnson forced Dietz, but took second on shortstop Roger Metzger's throwing error. After Alan Gallagher was intentionally walked, Fuentes hit a 2-2 offering into center and Johnson beat Cesar Cedeno's throw home.

Bobby Bonds gave San Francisco a 1-0 lead in the first with his second homer, but that was matched in the fifth when Bob Watson hit one for Houston.

Jim Beauchamp and Lou Brock each hit homers and knocked in two runs apiece for St. Louis and former Los Angeles infielder Ted Sizemore tormented the Dodgers with an RBI single and steal of home.

Beauchamp's bases - empty homer in the fifth broke a scoreless duel between St. Louis' Jerry Reuss and Los Angeles' Claude Osteen. The Cards added all the runs they needed with two in the sixth on a double by Ted Simmons and singles by Bock and Beauchamp.

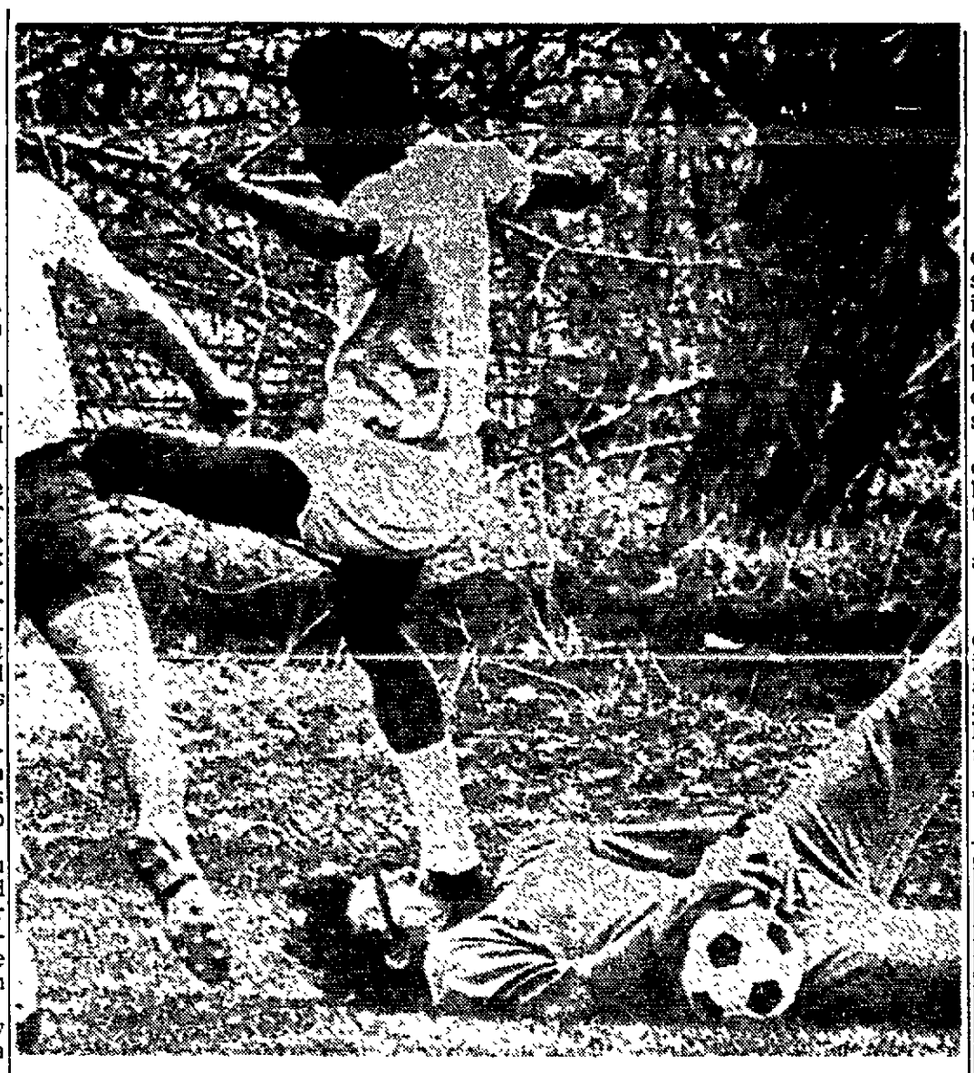
Gray Stops Ross in 4

TORONTO (AP) — Canadian welterweight boxing champion Clyde Gray of Toronto knocked out Don Ross, also of Toronto in the fourth round of a scheduled 10-round non - title fight Wednesday night. Gray weighed 151 pounds, Ross 154.



Goaltender Dave Ulmer had his face stepped on by Ambrose Esogbue during a "friendly" soccer match between Metropolitan State College and the Littleton Soccer Club at Denver, Colo. Wednesday. Escogbue was unable to stop after a goal kick on which Ulmer made a save. The stomp on the head was eased somewhat for Ulmer as his team won the game, 3-1. (AP Wirephoto)

Fast Ball Couldn't Blacken Eye

Cuellar Assortment Stops Hitters

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — Cleveland Indians Manager Alvin Dark says Baltimore pitcher Mike Cuellar "couldn't blacken your eye with his fast ball if he were three feet away and hit you right between the eyes."

But the Cuban southpaw had a much wider assortment of pitches Wednesday as he tossed a four-hit shutout to give the Orioles a 3-0 victory over the Indians.

Boog Powell provided the Orioles with all the scoring punch they needed, hammering out a two-out, two-run homer in the third inning after a walk to Merv Rettenmund.

"Cuellar's a heck of pitcher," declared Dark. "He makes you hit what he wants you to hit. He's a pitcher as opposed to a thrower. He throws two different kinds of screwballs and he's always changing speeds."

A 24-game winner last season, Cuellar has the reputation of being a warm weather pitcher, but the left-hander told newsmen he "didn't feel cold at all" despite the 34-degree temperature, for the Businessmen's Special contest that started at noon before 4,676 fans.

"I felt strong all the way," said Cuellar, adding that he threw a curve ball and a screwball most of the time.

"Those were the pitches that were working," he said. "You use the thing that's working."

Cueller was brilliant the first six frames, allowing just a single by Roy Foster in the second. After Foster's single, Cuellar retired 14 Indians in a row before Vada Pinson opened the seventh with a single to right.

Baltimore, now 5-1, has received four complete games from its starting pitchers. Cleveland had its three-game winning streak snapped and its record dipped to 3-2, as Sam McDowell was charged with his first defeat.

The Indians left-hander allowed just three runs and four hits in the six innings he pitched, but all the safeties were hard hit.

McDowell has not pitched 13 innings this season and the Tribe has yet to score a run behind him.

Baltimore's third run came in the sixth on a single by Frank Robinson, a wild pitch and a double by Paul Blair.

Wisconsin OUTDOORS

MADISON — Wisconsin fishermen, like kids in a candy store, are having trouble making up their minds this week. Choices include panfish through the ice, eight-to-10 pound rainbow trout in Lake Michigan's open water and walleye and sauger in the Mississippi river.

Winter runoff is much more orderly than was expected earlier and high water is less of a threat to river fishermen.

Here are the reports from around the state:

NORTHWEST DISTRICT

Most inland lakes are still covered with ice and panfishing is generally good. Ice fishermen are advised to be wary of thin spots. Deer are moving out onto highways and car kills are at the season's high.

NORTH CENTRAL DISTRICT

Snowmobiling has ended though about a foot remains in some wooded areas. Panfishing is rated as very good on most lakes.

WEST CENTRAL DISTRICT

Walleye and sauger are hitting below dams on the Mississippi though the river is about a foot above flood level. The majority of lakes and flowages in the district are now free of ice. Predictions of widespread flooding haven't materialized. So far, the moisture has been soaking directly into the soil, reducing runoff. Waterfowl migration is in full swing.

LAKE MICHIGAN DISTRICT

Ice is gone along the Lake Michigan shore, but Green Bay remains frozen. Rainbow and brown trout are being taken off Jackson Port and Baileys Harbor is yielding rainbows up to 12 pounds. Inland fishing is expected to improve as water levels go down.

SOUTHERN DISTRICT

Walleye are beginning to move in Rock and Jefferson. Dipping for buffalo in Beaver Dam river is excellent. Some 30 pounders are being taken with an average of 10-12 pounds.

SOUTHEAST DISTRICT

Most lakes are still ice covered in the Burlington and Delafield areas. Pewaukee lake in Waukesha county is providing some northern pike action on tip-ups. Limits of bluegill are being taken from many lakes. Lake Michigan, from Milwaukee to Kenosha, is producing rainbow and brown trout up to eight pounds.

Sinatra to Receive Jean Hersholt Award At Oscar Ceremonies

Singer May Seem Unlikely Person For Humanitarian Role, Yet It's True

BY JAY SHARBUTT

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Frank Sinatra receives an Oscar tonight for his works as a humanitarian. The choice has puzzled some.

Sinatra a humanitarian?

The 55-year-old singer, who recently announced his retirement after three decades as a performer, has been the subject of thousands of headlines. But relatively few concerned good works.

Yet along with such headlines as "Sinatra Plus Trio Mix Fists with Newsman" newspaper files include the likes of "Crooner Gives Fund for Shriners' Hospital," "Sinatra Sponsors New Scholarship" and "Sinatra Music Grants at UCLA Increased."

Keeps Quiet

Sinatra and aides are not loquacious about his benevolences, but it is apparent that the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences has ample documentation for choosing him to receive this year's Jean Hersholt Memorial Award.

The honorable Oscar has since 1956 been given to "an individual in the motion picture industry whose humanitarian efforts have brought credit to the industry." The Oscar will not be Sinatra's first. He was best supporting actor of 1953 for his role as the feisty Pvt. Maggio in "From Here to Eternity."

Hersholt winners have included Bob Hope, Gregory Peck, Martha Raye and George Jessel.

Last Appearance

In what is billed as his final professional performance, Sinatra sings next month at a big affair for Motion Picture Relief.

In 1962 he had a nine-country around-the-world tour that raised $1.2 million for handicapped and orphaned children, paying his own and his band's expenses estimated at $300,000 from his own pocket. Last year in Richmond, Ind.; his benefit for the family of Dan Mitrione, U.S. adviser killed in Uruguay, raised $100,000.

He pledged $1 million for a Palm Springs medical education center named for his father. Through benefits, he raised another million for the Father Dismas Clark Fund to help rehabilitate teen-age delinquents in St. Louis.

Many Good Deeds

Associates say his private good deeds are legion, but Sinatra tries to keep them that way —private.

"He would cringe at the fact I discuss these things," says a long-time business associate."

Sinatra, he says, has a habit of "picking up entire hospital bills for people who to this day don't know Sinatra was paying." One such, he says, was a $20,000 tab for a famous actor Sinatra knew but slightly.

Another associate recalls other examples: the singer's reimbursement of a widow who spent her life savings trying to help a wounded Vietnam war veteran, and a check for $1,500 to help a San Diego, Calif. police youth sports program.

Oscar Reigns Tonight With Star Cast

BY TV SCOUT

3-11 Channel 5 — Oscar, alias the Academy Awards, rides again, as the 43rd annual motion picture award show is telecast from Los Angeles' Music Center. You'll see dozens of stars presenting the awards — virtually e v e r y b o d y except George C. Scott, the Great Refuser. Four of the nominated songs will be performed by Petula Clark, Lola Falana, Shirley Jones and Glen Campbell and the fifth, "Thank You Very Much," by a quartet —Miss Clark, Sally Kellerman, Ricardo Montalban and Burt Lancaster. There will be brief retrospectives of the work of Lillian Gish, Ingmar Bergman and Orson Welles, who will all receive honorary awards. Quincy Jones is musical director and this year's sound will be more modern; he'll have 48 musicians and four girl singers in the pit. There's no real MC but Bob Hope will be around with a monologue.

6:30-7 Channels 2-7 — Family Affair tells the one about the parent — Brian Keith — who is unhappy with his child's romance and offers a distraction which backfires. Cissy (Kathy Garver) is talking marriage with her boy friend, so Uncle Bill (Keith) takes her to Hollywood, but a more formidable romantic idol turns up in the person of a Western star (Aron Kincaid). (R)

6:30-7:30 Channels 11-9 — Alias Smith and Jones tells a weary tale of the boys (Pete Duel and Ben Murphy) who pick up the wrong carpet bag on a train, and, in a hollowed-out Bible, find a fortune in gems. Only thing is the gems are fake, and the p r o b l e m is who switched them. Among those involved is Severn Dardern, who plays two roles — the railroad owner and his son.

7:30-8 Channels 11-9 — More of mother-in-law's spiteful spells on Bewitched. Endora (Agnes Moorehead) thinks Darrin (Dick Sargent) is a grouch so she turns him into a rotten-joke-teller, then switches and makes him laugh at tragedies.

7:30-8:30 Channel 5 — A parole officer (William Shatner) is shot at on Ironside and he thinks a disgruntled parolee did it. Ironside (Raymond Burr) and his gallant band turn up several other suspects but the actual attacker may surprise you. The whole thing is somewhat contrived: none of the suspects, for example, has an alibi.

8-8:30 Channels 11-9 — Danny Thomas has fun with today's movies on Make Room For Grandaddy. One of today's film geniuses casts him in a film — and the poor Danny learns he has to play a scene with a nude actress. (R)

8:30-9 Channel 5 — Adam-12 for tonight was scheduled for March 25, but the NCAA basketball tournament pre-empted it. It's mostly the story of a safe-cracking job. The MO of the thief seems to fit an old-timer, but he appears to be reformed and, in fact, is raising a couple of orphaned children.

8:30-9:30 Channels 11-9 — On Dan August, Ricardo Montalban plays the leader of striking Chicanos in Santa Luisa, where the Mexican-American population is about to explode. And then a little Mexican girl is killed — she's the niece of Sgt. Rivera (Ned Romero), one of August's men. (R)

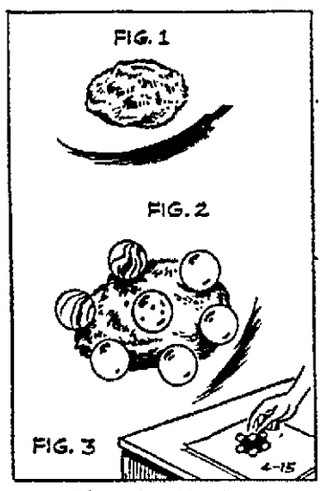
Colorful Marbles Stud 'Mib-Stone' Paperweight

BY CAPPY DICK

A "mib-stone" paperweight is a special handmade object that actually is a display of some of your most colorful marbles. As a paperweight on your desk (figure 3) it serves a useful purpose, of course.



Glue the Marbles

Start by selecting a round, but rough stone about two and a quarter inches in diameter. One surface of this stone, to serve as the bottom, must be flat. The other surface, which will become the top of the paperweight, must have some depressed spots to serve as snug little nests for the individual marbles to fit into as in figure 2. Test the marbles to make sure the hollow places are suitable.

Clean the stone with a brush and water. When it has been dried, attach the marbles. The easiest way to do this is to apply glue to a hollow area of the stone and set a marble into it. Immediately press a little circle of modeling clay around the marble to help hold it in place until the glue has dried.

After all the marbles have been placed, set the stone aside for the glue to dry. When you are sure the marbles are firmly in place, carefully remove the modeling clay. Glue a piece of felt to the bottom of the rock to keep it from scratching any surfaces on which you place it.

Kalata Blasts Lethargy of Citizen Group

Advisory Committee Doesn't Even Meet, Council Is Informed

Lethargy among citizen committees, and the Citizens Advisory Committee in particular, came under fire Wednesday as the Appleton City Council reviewed its rules.

Ald. Walter Kalata (2nd) pointed out that the council asked the Citizens Advisory Committee to study his proposal to combine the posts of alderman and county board supervisor.

The referral was made Dec. 2, and the council ordered a report by May 1. But Kalata pointed out that the committee hasn't met yet.

"It seems to me that we should be able to put some teeth somewhere, so that when we create an advisory committee it must respond, and not be an honorary position," Kalata said.

City Clerk Elden Broehm pointed out that the advisory committees meet at the call of the chairman, just as the council's standing committees meet.

Someone pointed out that council committees, consisting entirely of aldermen, are kept in motion by the fact that members must stand for election every two years.

Chief Function

Ald Alvin Tews (5th) suggested the chief function of citizen committees is to receive issues too hot or unpleasant for the council and standing committees to handle. If an issue is "valid," Tews suggested, it should be handled by a standing committee in the first place. Broehm termed the citizen committee device "a garbage barrel," and Tews agreed.

But Kalata suggested the special committees serve a useful function, by giving the council advice on matters where aldermen themselves have "too much of a vested interest" to act impartially.

Broehm pointed out the Citizens Advisory Committee was formed as part of the city's program to become eligible for federal aid. Kalata said if all that is necessary to receive aids is "to have these committees on paper, I'm all in favor."

He was told that if the council wishes, it can allow an advisory committee to die simply by failing to recreate it next week.

Kaukauna School Students to Get Bike Licenses

KAUKAUNA — Park School students will be able to obtain licenses for their bicycles starting at 9 a.m. Saturday in the school parking lot.

Kiwanis Club and Jaycee members will assist police in checking bicycles and registration. Plans call for registration at each school in the city on a different Saturday to make it possible to check all bicycles. Parents are to check all safety factors on bicycles before their children apply for licenses.

Brakes, warning signals, lights and reflectors are particularly important, but inspection also will be made of the frame, pedals, wheels and other factors which could make the bicycle hazardous to the rider or to others. Licenses will not be issued to bicycles considered to be in an unsafe condition.

County System Needs Local Library Backing

Efforts will be made by an ad hoc library committee to meet individually with the various library boards and librarians in Outagamie County as the next step in attempting to sell a county library system.

Members of the ad hoc study committee, which includes three county supervisors and representatives of some libraries, will present their proposals to the various boards and then ask for a joint meeting of all library boards and librarians on May 19 to further discuss the proposal.

The ad hoc committee has internally agreed that a consolidated library system in Outagamie County would provide the best library service countywide at the lowest cost but admits it has a selling job to do to convince the local communities.

County Library Board

Under a consolidated system, a county library board would replace the existing local boards and cost of operating all of the libraries would be taken over by the county.

There are seven libraries in Outagamie County and two libraries (New London and Oneida) which serve more than one county.

The county pays a subsidy to the libraries for services provided to communities which do not have libraries. However, library officials indicate this subsidy represents less than half the cost of providing the service.

A preliminary report on the status of the existing libraries and how they rate compared to what are considered minimum standards, was presented to the committee Wednesday night by Supv. Kenneth Gibson, Appleton, ad hoc committee chairman.

Along with the preliminary report, a potential cost estimate for conversion to a county system was submitted.

Both are to be considered by committee members and then revised before being given to the local library boards for their consideration.

Family Supper Set By AAL Branch 18

KAUKAUNA — A family night covered-dish supper for branch 18 of the Aid Association for Lutherans will be held at 5 p.m. April 25 in the dining room of Trinity Lutheran Church.

A short business meeting will be followed by entertainment. Members may bring guests and should notify Mrs. Fred Mason of plans to attend.

In charge of arrangements are Mrs. Clifford Rogers Sr., Mrs. Ray Prellwitz, Mrs. Harold Locy, Mrs. Erma Schmidt, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Wenzel, Harold Steinbach and Mrs. Mason.

Woehler to Take Oath of Office

County Administrator Alvin Woehler will be sworn in as Outagamie County's first executive at 10 a.m. Tuesday.

Circuit Court Judge Andrew Parnell will administer the oath of office to Woehler with the county judges participating in the ceremony.

Woehler does not actually take office until May 3, but he requested the earlier swearing in so it could be done while the county board is in session.

He said he wanted it done then so they could have all three branches of government together — judicial, executive and legislative — as a demonstration of unity.

Mueller Hearing Begins

Burglary Plans Described

Plans for a burglary at Xavier High School were described on the witness stand Wednesday by a woman who testified at the preliminary hearing of Harry Mueller, 28, Madison.

The hearing for Mueller, a suspect who was wounded during a police stakeout of the school Dec. 12, started anew Wednesday, before Outagamie County Judge Urban P. Van Susteren.

The first session had been called off Feb. 4 after Mueller caused a courtroom disturbance, and was ordered to undergo a mental examination at the Central State Hospital.

Mueller is charged with six burglaries and two other felonies. The state must prove probable cause that Mueller committed those crimes before binding him over to a higher court for the entering of pleas and possibly trial.

State's Witness

Mrs. James Wellens, 27, of 2815 Heather Ave., a key state's witness, testified that she planned the break-ins with Mueller, and Richard Eickhoff, 42, Madison, at a Combined Locks home. Eickhoff was killed during the stakeout.

Mrs. Wellens testified that she drew floor plans of the school and nearby St. Bernard Catholic Church showing Mueller and Eickhoff the location of the vaults and safes. Although the pair had come into town from Madison that weekend to burglarize a place in Green Bay, she said, a man there didn't have plans ready.

So they asked her to "lay out" a place in Appleton instead, she said. Mueller was interested in "what houses were in the area" of Xavier and St. Bernard, she said. But after viewing her diagrams, he crumpled them, saying, "We don't want anybody to see them."

Mrs. Wellens explained that she had been working with the district attorney's office and the Appleton Police Department in trying to solve some of the burglaries that plagued the Appleton area late last fall.

Learned of Plans

At the Combined Locks home, she said, she learned from Mueller and Eickhoff that "they were going to go in there (Xavier and St. Bernard Church) that same night, between 10 and 12 p.m. That was the time mentioned," she said.

After realizing that plans for the Green Bay burglary were not complete, Mrs. Wellens said, Eickhoff stated he'd take a .32 or .38 caliber pistol to Green Bay to see the contact there to find out if "something fishy" was on.

Alarmed at that, she testified, she asked both men if they had planned to use guns in any of the burglaries. "I've already shot two cops, and you don't see me in jail, do ya?" Mueller is said to have replied. She saw no firearms that afternoon, she said.

She said, however, that Mueller supposedly had a gun during another burglary with which he is charged at the Quaker Dairy Store, 125 E. Pacific St., in late November. Mrs. Wellens testified Muelder "ditched" the gun when police arrived at the scene of that break-in.

Mueller and another suspect are charged with the Nov. 26 burglary of Van's Supply and Equipment in Green Bay.

After the discussion with the men at the Combined Locks home, she went home and contacted Dist. Atty. James Long, she said. She informed him of the Xavier and St. Bernard plans, and mentioned the possibility of the men being armed.

Asst. Dist. Atty. R. Thomas Cane, the state's prosecutor, expected the hearing to last through today and perhaps go into Friday.

Interest Rate Ceiling On County Borrowing Removed by Senate

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Legislation removing a ceiling on rates at which counties can borrow money passed the Wisconsin Senate Wednesday.

The measure, which originally would have raised the maximum interest rate from five per cent to eight per cent, was sent back to the Assembly for concurrence in the amendment which removed the specified rate limit. The vote was 20-10.

Hot Lines Fund Request Tabled for Study

BY BILL LEACH
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

An application to fund $7,858 to Appleton's Hot Lines, Inc., was tabled by the Fox Valley Council of Governments' Law Enforcement Technical Advisory Committee Wednesday after members agreed that an investigation of the organization's articles of incorporation and the credentials of its telephone operators was needed.

A committee consisting of Appleton Police Chief Earl Wolff, former Winnebago County Dist. Atty. Thomas Fink and Butte des Morts Junior High School Principal William Ott was appointed to study the local Hot Line, a "Crisis intervention service" for problems dealing with drug use, family problems, pregnancy and alcoholism, and report its findings back to the advisory committee at its May 19 meeting.

At the time, a decision to reject or accept the application for funding and forward it to the regional committee for action will be made.

It was Fink who first questioned the ligitimacy of the organization. He wanted to know if it didn't provide an opportunity for drug pushers, serving as telephone operators, to distribute illegal drugs.

Can't Prescribe

Jerry Haugner, president of Hot Lines, Inc., replied, "No one who is answering phones there is allowed to be on drugs at the time" and no one is allowed to advise what type of drug to take to counteract the effects of another. "We can't even prescribe aspirin," he said.

Haugner and Chase Riveland, a telephone operator, represented Steven C. Langlais, project supervisor and an Outagamie County social worker, who was unable to attend the meeting.

Committee members decided to approach Langlais to find out exactly what the organization's stand is on informing law enforcement officials of known shipments of drugs into Appleton and the area.

They were dissatisfied with Haugner's and Riveland's answers. Haugner had said, "We're not for or against drugs, just in between." He said he would not let authorities know of any planned shipments of drugs into the area. He didn't believe that would be turning his back on the law.

Chase said it wasn't the organization's function to "report rumors. I don't think they would really be withholding information."

Tremendous Idea

Fink said he thought the idea behind the organization — to offer counseling to persons who need it and to provide someone to talk to — was a "tremendous idea," but he didn't want to supply money to a group that could help to undermine statutes

Official Raps 'Anti-City' Bill

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — A pending legislative bill that would permit suburban towns to incorporate as cities through a simple referendum vote is probably the worst of the "anti-city" measures offered in the legislature this year, the executive of the League of Wisconsin Municipalities says.

Ed Johnson of the League offered the characterization in an urgent letter to members of the State Senate asking them to kill the measure sponsored by a suburban town government lobby, and now awaiting the first test vote in the legislature's upper house.

Present law permits towns to incorporate when they comply with statutory standards, as tested by the state department of local affairs and development. Among the criteria are tax valuation, population and the existence of "urban characteristics" in the area proposed to be given status as a city.

The pending bill was written on behalf of about eight towns in the state which border parent cities, and which have sizeable valuations. Among them are the towns of Menasha, bordering Appleton, Neenah-Menasha and Ashwaubenon, bounding Green Bay.

Johnson said the bill's sole purpose is to make the sponsoring towns' boundaries "inviolate to annexations."

It is simply an attempt to perpetuate the status quo for a few towns which presently find themselves in a favorable economic position."

He said it would be "extremely detrimental to the orderly growth of urban areas" and said that constructive revision of annexation laws is available to the lawmakers in other pending bills. He noted that the suburban towns' bill had been defeated in the two preceding legislative sessions.

Shooting Death Brings Charge Of Murder

Preliminary Exam Set April 28 for Victim's Ex-Wife

OSHKOSH — Petite, dark-haired Helen Harn, 53, who resides in a trailer court in Wisconsin Rapids, was charged with first degree murder in the shooting death of her ex-husband, Mack Harn, 57, route 1, Neenah, Wednesday afternoon in Winnebago County Court.

County Judge James V. Sitter set bond at $25,000, subject to review within 72 hours. A preliminary examination was set for April 28. Mrs. Harn appeared without an attorney, saying he was out of town.

Harn, owner of Harn's Barn, Neenah, died at 8:53 a.m. Wednesday of complications resulting from a .22-caliber rifle gunshot wound in his right lower abdomen, according to Duane Moore, Winnebago County coroner.

Harn had undergone surgery and had been in critical condition at Theda Clark Hospital since the shooting Tuesday afternoon.

Children in Court

Four of Mrs. Harn's relatives, children and their spouses, were in court Wednesday afternoon. She smiled faintly at them and told them she was glad they were there.

Richard H. Guenther, special investigator for the district attorney's office, said Wednesday during a press conference that Mrs. Harn offered no resistance when she was taken into custody at her ex-husband's white frame house about a half mile north of County GG on U.S. 41 in the Town of Vinland.

Another woman was at the house when police arrived, but he would not say if she was there at the time of the shooting. The criminal complaint indicated that she was a witness to the shooting.

First Call

At the press conference Wednesday, Lt. Wilbur Fuller of the Winnebago County Sheriff's Department said the first call about a shooting was received in the office at 3:24 p.m., but the caller gave vague directions and officers and the Menasha ambulance could not pinpoint the residence.

The ambulance arrived at the Harn house a half hour after the initial call was received Fuller said it is possible Harn himself made the call for help.

When sheriff's officers arrived, they found Harn on a bed in the bedroom and Sylvia Messing, 32, Oshkosh, sitting on the bed.

Not Disclosed

Mrs. Harn was at the house when police arrived. Her whereabouts before and after the shooting are part of the investigation and cannot be disclosed, according to Fuller. He said the .22-caliber rifle is owned by Mrs. Harn.

Assistant Dist. Atty. Henry Mathewson asked that reporters not release what Mrs. Harn said to police about the shooting as pretrial publicity of her re-

4 Children Rescued From Island

Four Menasha children, three from one family, were pulled to safety Wednesday afternoon from a small island in the Fox River near Lutz Park where their small boat became marooned after running out of gasoline.

They are Judy Phillips, 13, and her brothers Daniel, 14, and David, 12, children of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Phillips, 510 Fifth St., and Vickie Hidde, 12, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hidde, 500 Fifth St.

The youngsters rented the 12-foot craft from a dealer on Little Lake Buttes des Morts, then fitted a 7½ horsepower motor owned by Phillips onto it.

"I guess they got adventuresome and wanted to see what things looked like in Appleton," Mrs. Phillips said of the episode this morning. When the children got to Lutz Park, the motor ran out of fuel.

The current started to drag them downstream and one of the boys latched onto the tiny island as the boat floated by. The children could have plunged over a dam several hundred yards downstream, had they not attached themselves to the island.

An unidentified person at the Appleton Yacht Club, 1114 S. Pierce St., notified police that the children appeared to be stranded.

An off-duty Appleton fireman, Thomas Corbett, who was in the vicinity trying out a new trolling motor, offered his boat to bring the children ashore when police arrived.

Police tried unsuccessfully to throw a tow line to the island. Corbett maneuvered his craft out to the island and tied a tow rope to the other boat. After about an hour, police safely pulled the boat carrying the youngsters to shore.

Police first received the telephone distress call about 12:45 p.m.

University Systems Merger Needs Lengthy Study, Weaver Believes

University of Wisconsin President John C. Weaver expressed grave concern Wednesday night about the proposed UW-State saying he thought officials were moving too fast on such a major shift.

Weaver, who took over the UW helm in December, said he was "not flat out negative" about merger but that he felt the problem is so complex that a lengthy study should first be made of the idea.

"If Kaukauna, Neenah, Menasha and Appleton will merge, maybe we can too," he said, noting the complexities.

He admitted the subject confounded him, as it probably did others. He said the proposal had made his transition as UW president much more difficult.

Chamber Meeting

Weaver's remarks about merger came after the 50th annual meeting of the Appleton Area Chamber of Commerce at the Conway Motor Inn. He told chamber members that the UW was a great university, and still is, and he also promised to use the "power and force of reason" to prevent violence and destruction there.

Weaver, a Madison native, said he felt the merger concept should be studied indepth to determine all the implications — which he said weren't known now — before any legislative action is taken. He suggested that the study should be initiated by this legislative session and possibly acted on by the 1973-75 Legislature.

The UW and State Universities systems have done a good job, he said, and the state should be careful not to upset that unless it's sure the new plan will be better. He said there is a question still unanswered, and that is "why is it a good idea from an educational standpoint."

Weaver expressed "great doubt" the merger would save the state money but noted this also needed further study.

The former University of Missouri president said that he was happy with the decentralized UW system which brings education to the residents. "That has a lot to say for it."

However, he said the merger proposed by Gov. Patrick Lucey wouldn't consolidate educational activities but rather management activities. The merger would make the UW system "twice as big and twice as complex."

He said educators recently met with Lucey and the governor, agreed to wait a year on the merger, allowing study time.

Weaver told his audience that it should be proud of the UW, as well as the State Universities system. He said that despite the dissidents and noise, the aspirations, ideas and worth of the university are still intact.

Weaver, whose father taught at the UW for 43 years, said the UW administration felt responsible for the lives and futures of the 70,000 young people in the system. He noted that this responsibility "weighs heavily on your (administrators') conscience."

He noted the UW had grown tremendously since he left Mad-

COG Future Hazy

BY ARLEN BOARDMAN
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Regional officials said Wednesday that they were reluctant to withdraw too quickly from the Fox Valley Council of Government (COG) and suggested that perhaps the agency shouldn't be disbanded.

The surprise move came as they discussed fears that the federal agencies might cut off member municipalities' aid eligibility if there is a lull between the disbanding of COG and forming of a new planning agency.

They voted to table a resolution declaring intent to form the new agency and withdraw from COG and directed the policy committee to study two problems:

— The amending of COG bylaws so members aren't required to give six-month notice of intent to withdraw. This would have to be passed by a two-thirds delegate vote and would allow members to stay in COG until a new agency is ready to operate.

Tri-County Area

— The possibility of inviting at least the counties of Calumet, Winnebago and Outagamie to join the agency, which would bring the area into compliance with new federal planning requirements of the tri-county metropolitan area. There is pending state legislation to facilitate county membership.

The moves would be a shift from COG's March action endorsing the formation of a new planning agency to serve at least the three counties and possibly eight in the mid-valley region.

Menasha Mayor James Adams expressed the strongest concern. He said he didn't want his city to become a part of a new agency until the agency had a satisfactory structure, which he expected would take some time to form.

He also warned that federal agencies might determine the area's municipalities ineligible for federal funds for a period if they aren't continuously in an active and staffed regional planning agency.

Could Cover Area

New state and federal planning guidelines have forced a shift in regional planning agency boundaries by 1972. Neither COG nor the Northeastern Wisconsin Regional Planning Commission cover the proper geographical area but both could with certain shifts.

When the idea for merging the agencies was killed, COG delegates endorsed the new agency. Under present COG bylaws, members must declare their intent to withdraw from the agency six months before the end of the calendar year.

No member has declared an intent to withdraw but all must decide by July 1 unless the bylaws are changed. The committee will report by June so an amendment can be approved.

Charles Littlefield, COG legal counsel, said the change could be made. He also noted that the bylaws are broad enough so that counties could join COG if they desired to.

Shows Concern

He added that he was concerned about COG disbanding because the municipalities had spent so much money in it and

Supervisors Split On Future Course Of County Planning

BY DON CASTONIA
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Which way will Outagamie County go on regional planning? Members of the county board's executive committee renewed their debate on the issue Wednesday but came no closer to making a decision than they have been in the past.

Underneath the verbage, the debate was between supervisors favoring the Fox Valley Council of Governments (COG) and those favoring staying with the Northeastern Wisconsin Regional Planning Commission of which the county is now a member.

Supv. G. Allen Bubolz's suggestion that more information be obtained on the effects of members withdrawing from either planning agency before any county action is taken was accepted without any specific proposal for getting more information.

After nearly an hour of fruitless debate on the merits of staying in or withdrawing from the planning agencies, Bubolz said it would be "well to find out the effects of our proposals. If we withdraw, (from Northeastern) will we lose our certification (for federal funds) and be in limbo?"

He claimed that if "members withdraw from COG and Northeastern willy-nilly it will benefit those most who want to drag their feet on planning."

Backs Merger

He said the proposal to merge the two agencies was the most satisfactory solution put forward to end the overlap and duplication in planning since none of the other proposals provided any follow up for a new agency.

Bubolz said the failure to merge the two agencies would "shatter the human resources that have taken years to build up."

This was disputed by COG-oriented supervisors. Supv. Edward Spierings, Little Chute, said he thought creation of a new planning agency could be accomplished in the next eight months (to meet the January, 1972 deadline) without merging the existing agencies.

Earlier, the rural-urban planning split had been argued. Supv. Kurt Koletzke, Appleton, said "Our planning needs are not the same as Florence County's," noting that Florence and Outagamie are now in the same agency.

Supv. Joseph DeBruin, Town of Buchanan, agreed. "The demands for services are entirely different. There is no comparison. If we get Outagamie, Winnebago and Calumet together, we've got something compatible."

Appleton Supv. Fred Rehfeldt disagreed. "Distance doesn't mean anything today. If you lose the river basin (from the planning agency) you've lost a lot."

Supv. Eugene Kloes, Appleton, questioned the function of regional planning itself.

Appleton Machine Co. Elects New President

Vernon K. Lamberg, 41, Green Bay, has been elected president of the Appleton Machine Co., filling the post left vacant by the January death of Tany Agronin. The company announced the move today.

Vernon Lamberg

Lamberg, who was named acting president following Agronin's fatal heart attack, was picked as president Feb. 1 by the board of directors. He is a native of Green Bay.

He had been vice persident of finance and administration since 1967. Lamberg joined the firm in 1959 as controller.

He also is treasurer of Appleton Machine's eastern subsidiary, Appleton Atlantic, Inc., and director of Gilbert and Nash Co., Inc., both suppliers to the paper industry.

Agronin had been president of the firm for about 10 years. He was 61.

Appleton Machine manufactures a wide variety of machinery and equipment for the pulp and paper, lumber and graphic arts industries.

Little Chute Faces School Bond Issue

LITTLE CHUTE — The board of education Tuesday night set May 18 as the date for a referendum on whether the school district should float a $350,000 bond issue with which to construct and equip a new elementary school.

The proposed building to be built near the high school would be designed along recommendations of the State Department of Public Instruction, using the open building concept. It would house 250 students initially and be flexible enough to permit expansion for 500 more.

The board decided to hold two informational meetings on the proposed building, the dates still undetermined. Supt. of Schools Leo Bronkalla was instructed to prepare a newsletter for distribution throughout the village, pointing out the need for a new building and explaining its features.

Bronkalla reported that enrollment in the elementary school next year will reach 453 which led to a discussion of space use in existing buildings and the possibility of renting class quarters in the event the new elementary school is not ready. Bronkalla said that school facilities already were overcrowded, and additional enrolments would make the situation critical.

A seven per cent wage increase effective May 1 was approved for maintenance personnel, and plans were made to meet Monday for salary negotiations with a teacher committee.

Bronkalla was instructed to secure prices for repair or replacement of existing yard and lawn equipment that have been in use five years. Findings are to be reported at the next meeting.

Permission was granted to Mrs. Robert Gneiser and the village Girl Scouts to conduct a summer library program for students from first through sixth grade at the elementary school library. Plans call for the summer reading program to run six to seven weeks, with sessions held Tuesday and Thursday mornings.

The board commended the Girl Scouts for their community service and offered to help them with any details.

Drinking Water With Meals Is Not Fattening

By G. C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am on a reducing diet and, to eliminate the extra calories of soft drinks and other beverages, I have been drinking water with my meals.

Recently I heard that drinking water with meals was the most fattening thing a person can do

Dr. Thosteson

— yet I thought water had no calories. I'd appreciate any advice. — E.D.

You were right in the first place, but there is a frightening lot of nonsense going around the "I heard" circuit.

Water has no calories, and therefore is not fattening under any conditions. That is not saying that water doesn't weigh anything. It does. It weighs quite a bit: one pound per pint.

Some trick reducing diets can achieve an apparent loss of weight by drying out the system by any of a variety of methods, just as prizefighters can "dry out" before weighing in for a fight, to stay below a certain weight limit.

It is also possible for athletes in training to sweat off several pounds in a single afternoon of vigorous training — five to ten pounds is not at all unusual in such activities as football training under a hot sun.

Yet this loss of water-weight is regained again overnight from drinking water (or other liquids) and from foods which contains varying but large amounts of water.

The point is that a healthy body requires a great deal of water, both in the tissues, and flowing through the digestive tract and kidneys to carry off waste products.

A healthy body, deprived of sufficient water, will hang onto as much of it as it can; that same healthy body, if it gets more than it needs, will readily dispose of the excess.

Thus any "reducing" by means of avoiding water is an artificial, temporary, and in the long run potentially harmful way of losing weight.

There are cases, of course, of the body accumulating toomuch fluid, and the result is edema, or swelling. In that case, it may be necessary to use medication to help the system get rid of the excess, but that is a matter of a body that isn't as healthy as it ought to be, and is entirely apart from ordinary reducing.

Water has no calories. Neither does tea or coffee, unless calories are added in the form of sugar or cream. There are also low-calorie soft drinks, of course, if you want some flavoring without adding many calories.

But there's nothing wrong with drinking plain water with your meal if you want to.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have hard "scales" at the corners of my mouth. I am wondering if it could be caused by lack of vitamins, by my brand of lipstick, or possibly the need for dental work. Can I have your opinion? — B.W.

It could be all three — or any.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My periods have been extremely irregular since the birth of my baby (premature) and I am also very uncomfortable. My doctor wanted to do a D. and C. and I was to call him back to say when. I do not intend to call him. What I want to know is what the future can hold for me. I am 27. — Mrs. J.F.R

You want to know what the future holds — but you won't let the doctor do the D. and C. (dilation and curettage) to find out what the situation is? What kind of nonsense is that?

Call the doctor, and let him do whatever is necessary to find out what is wrong.

Don't take chances with "kidney trouble." It may be only minor, but it can be dangerous. Read Dr. Thosteson's booklet, "Your Kidneys - Facts You Need To Know About Them." Write to Dr. Thosteson in care of The Post-Crescent, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents in coin to cover cost of printing and handling.

"You'll Wonder Where the Needle Went"

by Terri Scott

Ever get the feeling you'd like to add new dimensions to your sewing hobby? We all do. And now I have a brand new idea for you. It's called the JOINER — and it's a brand new fabric bonding aid, that allows you to join two fabrics together with a steam iron. What's more, it resists dry cleaning and laundering. The JOINER is a special resin film that melts between two fabrics, creating a bond that is stronger than the fabric. Besides, the JOINER allows for changes. Just reheat and bond with your steam iron, take apart, reposition and then rebond. Available in tape (thin, 1.29; medium, 1.49; thick, 1.69) and sheet form (thin, 1.19; medium, 1.39; thick, 1.59; assortment, 1.39), it comes with complete instructions. Clip the coupon below and I'll send you a handy JOINER idea book, showing many, many ways to use and decorate with the JOINER.

Shooting Death Brings Charge Of Murder

marks could violate her rights, damage the case and even prevent it from being tried in Winnebago County.

The coroner said an autopsy was performed and the bullet recovered from Harn's body was turned over to the authorities and will be tested by the State Crime Laboratory.

Moore said the official ruling on the death would be announced after he conferred with Dist. Atty. William Carver, who was out of town until today.

Pathologist's Report

The pathologist's report indicated Harn died of shock produced by profuse bleeding caused by the wound which did extensive damage to the lower abdomen.

In Carver's absence, Mathewson drew up the criminal complaint and appeared in court for the state.

The Harns received a Mexican divorce in July, 1969, which was validated in Circuit Court Branch 1 of Winnebago County in January, 1970. They were married Jan. 16, 1939, and had eleven children, six of whom are minors.

In court, Mrs. Harn told Sitter that the five youngest children, ranging from 15 to 19, were being cared for by her sister.

Moore said Harn some years ago legaly changed his name from Matthew Harnitz Sr. His body was released to the Seefeld Funeral Home, Oshkosh.

A Plaque for 50 Years' membership in United Commercial Travelers of America was presented recently to Joseph A. Weber, right. With Weber are Harold Podzilni, right, past grand counsellor, and Loyd Heraly, senior counsellor. The Post-Crescent erroneously published a photogarph last week identifying the award as being for 50 years' membership in the Masons.

Hot Lines Funding Tabled

and fight the establishment.

Outagamie County Sheriff Calvin Spice has supported Appleton's Hot Lines in a letter to the Wisconsin Council on Criminal Justice.

Advisory committee members questioned the qualifications of the telephone operators who might be only 16. They doubted that anyone that young could supply accurate information in the case of an attempted suicide or some family matter. Riveland and Haugner pointed out that the services of qualified professional people — doctors, lawyers — were available to Hot Lines and its clients. Also, they said the operators go through a training period.

Hot Lines was founded in Appleton in March, 1970, and was incorporated in July.

In other business, the advisory committee accepted a $25,408 funding application for a 12-week in-service training program for Fox Valley Technical Institute-District 12 area law enforcement officers.

The program would run from September to December and is expected to draw 340 law officers. There were 287 last year.

12 Classes

Twelve 40-hour classes will be one week in duration. Officers will be relieved of their duties on forces to attend classes for one week. Area law enforcement officers, lawyers, teachers and others will conduct the in-service training sessions.

Also accepted for funding was a $6,799 application for law enforcement visual aids purchases to be used for in-service training, recruiting and as library resource material. The visual aids will be used to upgrade present law enforcement training and education.

Daniel Van De Hey, regional planner for the East Central Region on Criminal Justice, Kaukauna Mayor Gilbert Anderson, and Wolff were named to a committee to study an emergency telephone communications service for the COG area.

The system would incorporate the number 911 to be dialed when assistance from ambulance, fire department or police is needed. Dialing those three numbers would preclude having to consult a telephone directory or dial the operator in case of an emergency. The calls would be automatically connected with the proper agency.

The committee will discuss the feasibility of such a system in the Fox Valley with Wisconsin Telephone Co. personnel.

Panel to Discuss Aid To Parochial Schools

A panel discussion on government aid to private and parochial schools will be featured at 7:30 p.m. today at the meeting of the Fox Valley chapter of Americans United for Separation of Church and State.

The public is invited to the meeting at the Neenah Public Library. Speakers will include the Rev. Stanley Cottrell, Seventh Day Adventist Church of Appleton; Mrs. Gary Panetti, Fond du Lac, membership chairman for the chapter, and Charles Velte, Neenah attorney.

Long Paid Out $5,582 for Race

Dist. Atty. James Long spent $5,582.15 in his unsuccessful bid for Outagamie County executive April 6. The entire amount was spent by Long for Executive Committee, according to campaign expense statements filed with the county clerk.

County Administrator Alvin Woehler, who defeated Long by 432 votes, reported spending $2,001.15. Of this total, $1,626.15 was spent by Woehler for Executive Committee.

Including the primary race a month earlier, Long spent $8,999.45 and Woehler $4,042.03.

COG Withdrawal

now were beginning to reap the benefits. Adams agreed.

Kaukauna Mayor Gilbert Anderson said the resolution indicating intent to withdraw and form a new agency was to "show good faith" in any effort to form a new agency.

George Kroes, retiring Town of Vanden Broek chairman, said he agreed with Adams, adding that he opposed withdrawing from COG until Outagamie County withdrew from Northeastern, a multi-county planning agency. Both moves would be required to form a new tri-county agency.

Town of Buchanan Chairman Joseph DeBruin said his town board hadn't voted to withdraw but was given permission by the electors to do so, following the procedure taken for joining the agency.

Information Sheet

Harold Miller, citizen delegate from the Town of Grand Chute, suggested that an information sheet generally describing COG be prepared for county officials and others. He noted that ignorance of planning and its value was a major reason for opposition to it.

Eugene Franchett, COG executive director, said the attorney general's office is reviewing legislation facilitating counties joining regional agencies, such as COG. He said other agencies in Wisconsin favor the legislation and he predicted that it would pass.

Littlefield indicated that if Winnebago and Outagamie would withdraw from Northeastern, they could join COG now. Calumet isn't affiliated with either now.

Suggestions

Member communities will be allowed to make suggestions to the committee before May 15 to assist it in coming up with a recommendation.

In other action, delegates named a nominating committee of Neenah Mayor Roman Hauser, chairman; Bryon Murken, Oshkosh Common Council president; Ira Livingston, Town of Grand Chute chairman; and Ralph Risley, Menasha, citizen delegate. A memorial award committee consists of Adams, chairman; Edward Spierings, Little Chute president; and Risley. They must select officers and a memorial award winner for the May annual meeting.

Franchett said the Town of Menasha received its Department of Housing and Urban Development grant only because it applied while still a COG member. The town dropped out of COG Dec. 31 and still claimed to be eligible for federal funding.

Benefit Movie Aids 6th Grade Camping Fund

KAUKAUNA — Sixth grade students from the public schools are selling movie tickets to a movie, "80 Steps to Jonah," to help finance a May classroom camping trip.

Sixth graders will spend two and one-half days at the Green Bay YMCA camp under the direction of faculty members. Only tickets sold by students will be credited to the camping fund. The movie will be shown Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoon at the Vaudette Theater.

Mrs. John Stock, president of the Parent-Teacher Organization which handled arrangements for the movie, will accept phone orders for tickets.

County Planning Division

"Regional planning is becoming mainly a clearing house for federal aids. I see little day-to-day planning done," he said.

He also claimed there was so much confusion at the state and federal level on planning that nothing would be lost by not having planning. "What harm would there be if we have no planning for a couple of years until Washington and Madison know what they want?" he asked.

DeBruin agreed that there was some confusion on eligibility for federal aid. Citing the grants to the Town of Menasha after it had withdrawn from COG, DeBruin said, "I think both agencies overplayed the issue that you can't get aid unless you belong."

In other matters, the executive committee tossed back to the county board the problem of finding a landfill site for the proposed county-operated solid waste disposal program.

In doing so, County Board Chairman Russell DeLaHunt, Kaukauna, said he was dissolving the ad hoc committee which had been created to study and recommend whether the county should be involved in solid waste disposal. The committee was then given the job of recommending sites.

Panel Dissolved

DeLaHunt, in explaining why he was dissolving the committee, said "we were asking an ad hoc committee to do something it could not do — make a political decision." He said the decision on a site was the board's responsibility and directed the issue to the zoning committee.

DeBruin, who served on the ad hoc committee, said he is now convinced that landfill is only a short-term answer to the solid waste disposal and that recycling of wastes must be done.

Another issue, that of whether the county-owned house at 324 W. Sixth St., should be torn down, was referred back to the public property and parks committee for more study with instructions to attempt to determine what the effects of widening W. Sixth Street would have on the property.

Neighbors have objected to county plans to demolish the house and make a parking lot on the property and have offered to buy it from the county.

Kloes claimed the city was being "dishonest" with the people in not telling them what may result if the Oneida Street bridge is built. Sixth Street is being considered for widening to handle bridge traffic.

To Come Down

"Some homes will have to come down," Kloes said. "If we sell the house to those people, we would be just beguiling them." He suggests the county simply hold the property as it is until everyone knows what would happen to the neighborhood with the bridge.

County Administrator Alvin Woehler told the committee he was recommending abolishing the Fox Valley Campus trustees as a separate board. He noted that since the state took over more of the operating costs the county had little more than maintenance with which to be concerned.

He recommended that the two committees of jurisdiction (education and public properties) each delegate one of their members to serve as liaison rather than have him make appointments.

Woehler also questioned the planned attendance of Assistant District Atty. Thomas Cane at a month-long school in Texas later this spring. There would be no cost to the county.

Woehler said his only knowledge of Cane being selected for the school was through a newspaper article. He said there has been no other communication asking permission to attend.

"I am not being critical," he said, "I just want to protect the system." He was referring to the requirement that the executive committee must approve attendance at all schools or conventions.

UW President Says Merger Needs Study

ison 30 years ago. The UW now has 35,000 students at Madison and a like number in outlying campuses and extensions.

He called it an $800,000 a day investment in education, research and public service.

Weaver said the UW, for the first time in 17 years, would have fewer students at Madison than in the outlying campuses — by about 1,000. He called this a planned change in the decentralization.

The UW was set up as a relevant institution to the rural state and now must try to be "workable and significant in urban Wisconsin" also.

In chamber business, the new board of directors was introduced. They are Joseph Biebel, of Allis-Chalmers, Fredric Kiechel, of Fox Tractor Division of Koehring Co., W. W. Robertson, of Steinberg-Robertson Agency-Realtors, and Bernard Ziven, of I. Bahcall Industries, Inc. Robert Battiola, of H. C. Prange Co., was ill and couldn't attend.

Incoming chamber president, Franklin Nehs, Appleton attorney, presented a gavel to outgoing president, J. K. Babbitt, of Wisconsin Michigan Power Co.

Retiring board members are Nehs, George Hoffer, M. E. Olson, Babbitt and Gerhard K. Willecke.

Studded Tires Illegal After Today Until ..?

Today's the last day you can drive with your studded snow tires.

The present state law says studded tires can be used between Oct. 15 and Apr. 15, but there is a push to outlaw tires with studs year-around because of the damage they're causing to roads.

A bill to outlaw them after Apr. 15, 1972, and bar sale of them immediately after it becomes law was endorsed Wednesday by the State Senate's transportation committee.

Highway engineers reported that $10 million must be spent in resurfacing the expressway system of Milwaukee. Studs were blamed for the damage.

There has been discussion of taxing the sales of each studded tire at $100 to pay for road repairs.

Policemen to Take on Students in Basketball

A basketball game between members of the Appleton Police Department and students of the Fox Valley Technical Institute will be played at 7:45 p.m., today at the Huntley School.

Several members of the Appleton Police Department attend the FVTA police science program.

The game is open to the public and spectators are requested to use the northeast entrance to the school.

Survey Would Predict Water Levels

A $114,000 plan of the U. S. Geological Survey to predict levels of the Fox River and tributaries flowing into Lake Winnebago was proposed today to the Outagamie County Soil and Water Conservation district supervisors by Gerald Paul, chief hydrologist for the Northeastern Regional Planning Commission.

The three-year computerized study would contain information on water flow and, according to plans, would predict the impact of industrial and municipal water uses in the river and lake system in Outagamie, Winnebago, Brown, Calumet, Fond du Lac counties.

It would cost the counties involved an estimated $28,500, according to forecasts in a letter by C. L. R. Holt Jr., district chief of the U. S. Geological Survey.

Paul sought a chance to explain the entire program to industrial and municipal leaders at a meeting in Appleton. Supervisors have scheduled an informational session during early May although the exact date still is undetermined. The meeting is scheduled at the Outagamie County Courthouse.

"The broad purpose of the program is to develop a model whereby the quality and quantity of flow can be predicted," said Paul. He said the study will not conflict with a Fox Valley Council of Governments water quality study.

Joe Kasparek, route 1, Black Creek, committee chairman, endorsed the plan. "I think we need this done if we're to work from facts and not emotion."

Paul told the board members that the Northeast Regional Planning Commission would not work directly on the project but would supply data.

In a letter Holt said, "The model will provide a tool with which effects on quantity and quality of stream flow can be predicted before various changes are being made in the system."

The plan could, said Paul, analyze the impact of releasing massive amounts of water from dams, construction of municipal wells or impoundments to serve industry.

River Basin Atlases

A series of river basin atlases have been published recently by the U. S. Geological Survey, according to Holt's statement. The reports list basic surface and ground water hydrology of the Fox River and Winnebago Pool drainage area, which could be fed to computers to form the model.

The Southeastern Regional Planning Commission now is working with the U. S. Geological Survey on a similar plan near Madison. The Madison Water Utility is providing 50 per cent of the funds for that study. A third plan has been proposed for Southeastern Wisconsin.

If approved after informational sessions the plan would cost $42,900 in fiscal 1971, $46,200 in fiscal 1972 and $25,300 in fiscal 1973.

The local share of the project will be $10,725 in fiscal 1971; $11,550 in fiscal 1972 and $6,325 in fiscal 1973, according to Holt's estimate.

Paul emphasized that the plan could be jointly financed by industries, municipalities and counties involved.

IPC Receives $50,000 for Waste Study

Program to Delve Into Treatment of Pulp, Paper Residue

The Institute of Paper Chemistry has received federal funding for a feasibility study on advanced methods for treating combined pulp and paper wastes and municipal wastes.

The Upper Great Lakes Regional Commission, an agency concerned with the waters of the lakes region, this week approved a grant of $50,000 which nearly will be matched by about $40,000 in paper industry funds.

The test project will involve laboratory studies of using a physical-chemical treatment of selected pulp and paper waste water and municipal water through the use of activated carbon.

The Institute will design and operate for 90 days two pilot-sized physical-chemical treatment systems at the institute, under the direction of Dr. Averill J. Wiley, chief of the effluent processes group.

Environmental Control Technology Corp., Ann arbor, Mich., considered expert in the use of carbon absorption techniques, will work with the Institute, as will an Ann Arbor consulting firm. The Fox Valley Council of Governments will provide data.

Wendall Smith, secretary of the Institute, said a majority of the industries in the Fox Valley have indicated they will participate but the details of their contributions haven't been worked out.

He said the economic and performance capabilities of the tested process will be watched closely.

The study probably will be started in mid-summer and be completed in early 1972.

River Upstream Being Polluted

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Milwaukee River was cited as an example of what an environmental professor described Wednesday as Wisconsin's tendency to be leisurely about cleaning up some of its rivers.

Harry Brockel, a lecturer at the Center for Great Lakes Studies at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee, said control of pollution along the stream in Milwaukee County is fairly adequate.

But industries upstream in neighboring counties, he said, continue to pollute the river, sending wastes into Milwaukee.

He made his remarks at a meeting of the Milwaukee River Restoration Council a few hours after the federal government filed court action in Madison against six Wisconsin firms accused of polluting rivers.

Plan to Pay School Costs by Income Taxes Raises Doubts

Two state senators from the Fox Valley have voiced doubts about the feasibility of a proposal by an Appleton senior citizens' group to finance local schools through an income tax rather than the property tax.

Sen. Myron (Mike) Lotto, R-Green Bay, cited "complications in administering" a school district income tax, but said he is "open minded on this matter." Sen. Gerald Lorge, R-Bear Creek, said he prefers paying a larger share of school costs through the present state sales tax, but he has sent the income tax measure to the Wisconsin Department of Revenue for analysis.

The proposal, offered by local members of the American Association of Retired Persons, comes up for further discussion tonight by the legislative committee of the Appleton City Council.

Also on the agenda is a report from Finance Director David Champion on studies by finance directors from communities in the Wisconsin Alliance of Cities, attempting to analyze and offer alternatives to Gov. Patrick Lucey's shared tax and state aid redistribution proposals.

Champion is expected to report that the Alliance finance directors' committee, which he chairs, has found numerous faults in figures from the Department of Revenue.

The figures, attempting to show how the Lucey plan would have affected municipalities' financial status if it had been in effect last year, shows Appleton receiving $86,684 less under the Lucey formula than was actually received from the state.

Also coming up tonight is a proposal revived by Ald. Walter Kalata (2nd) for the city to withdraw from the Alliance, which Kalata claims has failed as a lobbyist for the city's interests in the legislature. The committee has asked Mayor George Buckley to answer the charges.

Sen. Lorge wrote City Clerk Elden Broehm that a school district income tax "would encourage people in the highest tax bracket to move outside the limits of the school district which imposes an income tax." He said he favors lowering local school taxes by subsidizing school districts with sales tax proceeds, "to keep control of the schools in the hands of the local people."

But he has asked Edward Wiegner, secretary of the Department of Revenue, for a report on the percentage of income tax required to eliminate Appleton district school taxes, and to analyze the administrative procedure and cost. Lorge also asked how much money would have to be raised through statewide income taxes to pay either all or 75 per cent of all state elementary and secondary school costs.

Lotto said administering a school district income tax would be made difficult by school boundaries which are irregular and overlap those of many municipalities.

He added that the trend is to reduce the number of tax-levying governmental districts, rather than to add more, and said local governments have historically shown little enthusiasm to impose new kinds of taxes.

Circus Plans Neenah Visit In August

NEENAH — A three-ring circus is coming to Neenah on Sunday, Aug. 1, sponsored by the Neenah Downtown Business division of the Chamber of Commerce.

The King Brothers Circus will give two performances and will feature clowns, aerialists, tumblers, animals and 22 acts during the 90 minute shows.

According to Dennis Bump, chairman of the circus and downtown business group, proceeds from the circus will be used to purchase new Christmas decorations. "With the extreme winter weather conditions last Christmas season, our decorations took a real beating and it's necessary to purchase several pole decorations this year."

Bump said the decorations would cost about $4,000. He also announced plans for an early July "Christmas in July" sale to display the new decorations and to sell the circus tickets.

Lower Boat Stall Fee Sought for Menasha

MENASHA — Some people are angry about a 100 per cent increase in boat stall fees at Jefferson Park. Representing that anger, Sixth Ward Ald. Hugh (Bud) Geibel says he will introduce a resolution Monday calling for a lowering of the fees.

Geibel's father, Hugh Geibel, Sr., was one of several boat stall renters at Jefferson Park who went before the park and recreation board recently to protest the fee raise, which was officially adopted last December.

The board, however, stood pat on its original recommendation that fees for the 50 stalls be raised from $7.50 to $15 annually. The $7.50 increase, says Park and Recreation Board Chairman Robert LaCount and Park Supt. Thomas VanBuskirk, will be used for eventual maintenance and rejuvenation of the stalls.

Geibel's resolution will call for a uniform boat stall rental fee at the Jefferson Park stalls and the Smith Park stalls (there are 13) of $10. Fees at Smith are now $7.50. VanBuskirk said there was no raise in those fees "because the $7.50 wouldn't even begin to help to recondition those."

The maintenance and repairs of the boat stalls is scheduled for 1974 in the park and recreation board's proposed park development plan.

Ball Park

In another development related to the park plan, Mayor James Adams said today that the question of where the next Menasha ball park will be located will be "resolved by next Tuesday."

He said a site for the new ball park will be proposed. He would give no details. The city has been looking at several possible new ball park sites in anticipation that International Wagenknecht, which has an option on the present acre site along Sixth Street, will exercise it within the next year or two.

International signed the option on the ball park, which will cost them about over $60,000 in August, 1967.

Former Mayor John Klein at one time said the city would have a new ball park in operation last summer. There have been several other false alarms, which have stirred local interest.

Geibel said he feels he will have the support of at least six aldermen Monday when he introduces his resolution to lower the Jefferson Park boat rental stall fees.

Adams said he didn't think the fee increases were too large.

"There's a waiting list now for people who want to get stalls out there," he said adding that the increased fee has apparently not discouraged people from renting the stalls.

Items to Consider in Rating Travel Agent

BY SYLVIA PORTER

There are close to 8,000 travel agents in the U.S. and Canada accredited by the International Air Transport Association (IATA) for international ticket sales and by the Air Traffic Conference (ATC) for domestic ticket sales. Some, perhaps the majority of these 8,000, are experts, real pros in travel; some are knowledgeable only in a limited field; some are just order-takers and ticket sellers for the airlines that have appointed them. And a fringe are so lacking in qualifications that they rank with the growing number of unappointed travel organizers who are merely pseudo-agents.

To gain appointment to the IATA or the ATC, travel agencies must meet specified levels of experience in travel management, airline reservations and ticketing — but our basic laws and traditions bar either the travel agency associations or the airlines from weeding out all the inefficient and confining the field to an elite. Even the strongest defenders of today's travel agency system admit, "The woods are full of pseudo-agents."

Check Out Credentials

The travel agent can play a crucial role in helping you get the most from a bargain charter flight or an inexpensive package tour. Thus, here are guides for choosing one.

— Make sure the agent is accredited by the IATA or ATC and that he holds the imprinter plates of the principal airlines in which you are interested. Ask also if he is a member of ASTA (American Society of Travel Agents). While there are good agents who do not belong, membership is a plus. Note too if he has a "CTC" (Certified Travel Counselor) certificate on his wall, another indication he is an expert. In short, don't accept him as a professional travel agent because he claims he is. Make him prove it.

— Check with particular care any agent who offers you cut-priced tickets or cut-priced travel arrangements and be especially leary of tickets offered in places other than a travel agency or airline office. These are warning signals that you may be getting involved in a risky and-or illegal deal.

— If you are buying an inclusive tour package — airline plus such ground arrangements as hotel, sightseeing bus trips, etc. — question the agent about the credentials of the tour wholesaler involved. Ask him to identify the airline participating in this tour and to prove to you that its schedule regularly serves the areas in which you are interested. Find out if he or an associate is personally familiar with the places to which you plan to go.

Does He Offer Variety?

— Check whether the agent is realistic about the conveniences and comforts you can expect overseas and make him justify such expressions as "luxury" or "deluxe". Note also whether he has attempted to find out your tastes and previous travel experience; whether he has automatically tried to sell you the cheapest trip without determining your real needs; whether he is prepared to offer you a variety of travel arrangements and price levels. And when talking price, ask him to compare the price of the package with the cost of hotels, sightseeing trips, etc. if purchased individually.

— Expect the agent to sell you major items — airline tickets, advertised tours, stays at most well-known hotels — without asking for any fee or markup, for he earns his commission from the companies themselves. (This fact still seems only vaguely understood by most Americans.) Expect him to be a travel counselor and to be ready to talk over your trip or package at length.

— But don't expect him to send cables for reservations without charging you or to construct a custom-made tour for you without asking a fee for his extra work or to get you precisely the hotel or flight you want at the peak of the travel season.

Most agents, I repeat, are reliable and reputable — and the industry is now taking steps to tighten its requirements for accreditation of agencies. But a sufficient fringe are inadequate (or worse) to threaten you. Obey these rules and you'll protect yourself.

Hawaii Urges Return Invitation

HONOLULU (AP) — The Hawaii Senate has adopted a resolution asking the State Department to invite a Red China athletic team to the United States.

The visit was proposed as a return gesture for the invitation extended to an American table tennis team to play in Peking.

The resolution, introduced Tuesday by Republican Sen. Wadsworth Yee, urges the invitation "as a means of further opening channels of communications and trade and bonds of friendship between the people of the United States and Red China."

Now more than ever, the new increases in deductibles and co-insurance charges to be paid by the patient can leave sizable gaps in your Medicare coverage. For example, in 1971 the hospital inpatient deductible for the first 60 days of benefits has increased from $52 to $60 for each hospital stay.

Fill those gaps with Medicare-Extended coverage, for only $5.10 a month. Annual premium is just $61.20. This is only $1.20 more than the deductible of $60.00 you'd otherwise have to pay for each hospital stay. Don't risk being without this important protection. Get full facts now.

Hutchins Gives AFDC Breakdown

BY SANDRA SHACKELFORD
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Where does the taxpayer's dollar go? What makes up the AFDC (Aid to Families with Dependent Children) rolls? How do Wisconsin's welfare ranks stack up with other states?

Jerome Hutchins, client service specialist for the Division of Family Services of the Green Bay regional office, spoke Tuesday night to a group of Concerned Outagamie Mothers at Trinity English Lutheran Church, answering these questions with a slide presentation.

In reviewing the state's budget of $742,905,400 for 1969-70, he explained that the Department of Public Instruction receives $300,993,200; the Department of Health and Social Services, $173,581,400; the University of Wisconsin, $99,641,000; the State University System, $55,926,500 with other departments collecting $112,763,300. These sums do not include funds spent on highway or conservation programs.

Monetary Breakdown

Of the $173,581,400 allotted to the Department of Health and Social Services, the monetary breakdown reads: $85,000 for the Division of Aging; $3,752,400 for the Division of Health; $3,495,100 for the Division of Vocational Rehabilitation; $3,515,300 for the Division of Business Management and Executive Services; $23,594,700 for the Division of Corrections; $49,891,400 for the Division of Mental Hygiene and $89,247,200 for the Division of Family Services.

The AFDC caseload for 1969-70 as of July 1 totaled 21,000 in the state, which, said Hutchins, was an increase of 987 over the previous year. He said, however, that over 12,000 cases were closed during the same period.

Green Bay's representative told the COM group that of every 1,000 children in New York, 126 were recipients of AFDC funds. In contrast, of 1,000 children in Wisconsin, 38 receive assistance for which each taxpayer is taxed $10.40 per year.

Children are the prime receivers of funds amounting to $12,422,500 while adults are allotted $4,218,100.

Hutchins told the group that of the 19,037 adults who made up the AFDC caseload in December of 1969, 85.29 per cent were mothers who were needed at home by children who were very young, or who needed special supervision; mothers who were employed but did not make enough money to support the household; mothers who were unemployed but couldn't find jobs, or mothers who were unemployed because they couldn't get adequate day care for their children.

The remaining 14.71 per cent are fathers who are incapacitated or who are needed at home to care for children because there is no mother and no adequate day care.

Wisconsin's AFDC monthly basic allowance ranges from $380 for a family of 12 down to $67 for a family of one. This allowance excludes shelter.

Why the increases in the AFDC program?

Hutchins gave six reasons. An increase in the number of people of marriageable age and more and more earlier marriages; increase in divorce, desertion and illegitimacy; inflation causing family breakup in economically marginal families; the U.S. Supreme Court decision removing the residency requirement; the Wisconsin Attorney General's opinion that stepchildren are eligible for AFDC and the efforts of anti-poverty groups to have financially needy and eligible persons apply for AFDC.

A group advisor in the audience criticized the use of the word "cases" in reference not only to the women present but to all those receiving assistance.

"If you go around the state with these slides, you will perpetuate the idea that these mothers and these children are cases."

The client service specialist said that the critique was well taken but the word was part of the social worker's terminology.

Your Problems

Pity Child of Such a Mother

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I could never talk to anyone about this problem and I must tell it to somebody. It is getting me down.

My husband and I have been married 10 years. Our son, who is now 8, is a very handsome boy. He has my husband's eyes and smile, my nose, a great shaped head and a strong jawline. Everyone remarks on his good looks.

Our daughter is two years old, and I am sorry to say she is the homeliest child I have ever seen. Nature really played a dirty trick on us. It would have been much better if the boy had been homely and the girl had been good looking. A girl needs beauty — a boy doesn't. Our daughter inherited the worst features of both my husband and me. When people see her they don't know what to say. Occasionally someone will ask, "Is that your child, or is she adopted?" I know what they are driving at.

When our daughter is older we can have her protruding ears fixed, her chin built up and her nose remolded. Hopefully she will have a good figure. If she doesn't, there are several things a girl can do. But the growing up years are going to be very hard on this pathetic child. Please tell me how to face the future cheerfully. If you could name some movie stars who were homely youngsters, it would help a lot. — Star Crossed.

Dear Crossed: The pathetic one in the family is you — not your daughter. How sad that you attach so much importance to good looks. I hope you get your thinking squared away before you transmit your anxieties to the little girl — if you haven't done so already. How dreadful for a child to feel that she has let her mother down because she isn't beautiful. Get some counseling, Mother. You've got a geranium in your cranium.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A woman in our club made an announcement at the last meeting that her daughter had telephoned her the night before from New Jersey to tell her the good news. She accepted a ring and is going to marry a doctor. Everyone said, "Congratulations," and "Isn't it wonderful," and how nice that Rosalie is getting such a catch. I myself was making plans to give a kitchen shower for Rosalie when I heard the real story. Her fiance is a dentist!

I telephoned my friend and asked her straight out why she said "doctor" when he is only a dentist. She got mad and yelled, "A dentist is a doctor." I told her she knew perfectly well what I meant. She hung up on me. Will you please tell me who is right? I know I am but I want to hear it from. — Trouble in Shaker Heights

Dear Shaker: A dentist is a doctor and Rosalie's mother has every right to call him a doctor if she wants to.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: When two older women live together, say two widowed sisters, or a mother and a daughter, or even two friends, and a card is sent for both — such as a Christmas card or an Easter greeting, or a letter — whose name should appear on the envelope first? We have had two long discussions about this at our weekly card club. Some members feel the older person's name should be first, others say the names should be alphabetized. What do you think? — One of Two

Dear One: I must confess I have never given this a thought. And now that I have thought about it, would you believe I don't think it makes a darned bit of difference? Go back and tell your club they need a project.

Give in or lose him ... when a guy gives you this line, look out! For tips on how to handle the supersex salesman, check Ann Landers.
